SECRETARY OF WAR TO DRAW FIRST NUMBER

Roosevelt Declines Honor, But Will Make Speech Before Ceremony.

TWELVE-HOUR JOB

Big Glass Jar of World War Days Again To Hold Fate of Young Men.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — One week from today at noon Uncle Sam will start drawing the selective service numbers which will put the first 800,000 young Americans in uniform by next June, and millions more during the ensuing four years.

The historic drawing in the nation's first peacetime conscription program is expected to take a dozen hours or more. When it is finished, each of the 16,654,009 men who registered last Wednesday will know the order in which he is subject to call for a year's service in the army.

The big glass jar from which World war draft numbers were drawn will be used once again and, following the precedent of 1917, Secretary of War Stimson blindfolded will pull out the first number.

Plans for the draft drawing, which will be surrounded by patriotic ceremony and color, were completed yesterday at a conference between President Roosevelt and selective service Director Dykstra. At first Dr. Dykstra announced that the chief executive would pick the first number, but later he said that Mr Roosevelt wished the secretary of war to have this honor.

The president, however, will be present and will deliver an address before the actual lottery drawing begins. Military and civic notables are to attend, and as many of the general public as the large interdepartmental auditorium will hold.

Between now and next Tuesday each of the men who registered will be assigned a number by his local draft board. The numbers so assigned are serial numbers, and are not expected to run higher than 7,500 for any one local board area. The sequence in which these serial numbers are drawn in the Oct. 29 lottery will determine the order numbers—that is, the numbers designating the numerical

POST NUMBERS

Draft Boards Display Serial Numbers For Draftees.

Serial numbers for two Richland county draft boards were posted today and numbers assigned by the county's third board are expected to be completed by tomorrow.

Boards one and two have completed their lists and board three announced its list will be ready tomorrow.

The list from board number one, which has jurisdiction over Mansfield wards one, two, three and four is posted in the reception room at Memorial building, while those from area number two, made up of city wards five and six and Madison township are also posted. Headquarters for this board are at the Legion home.

Registrants from the remainder of the county, who were in area number three, will find their serial numbers posted in the courthouse, probably in the court of appeals room on the second floor.

British Consider Offensive In Some War Arena.

LONDON —(AP)— Lord Croft, undersecretary for war, indicated in a speech today that Britain looked forward to undertaking a land offensive in some theater and declared, "the war can never be won without a military decision, east or west, or on both fronts."

"That is why we are building up a great army," he added. "It must be an army of superior efficiency."

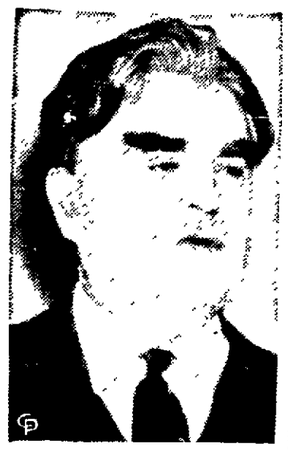
Backs Willkie



JOHN L. LEWIS

A radio broadcast has been scheduled for Friday night by Lewis, CIO chief, in which he explains his "all the way" support of Wendell L. Willkie for president.

WILLKIE GETS LEWIS SUPPORT

CIO Chief To Explain Step In Radio Broadcast Friday Night.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — John L. Lewis president of labor's CIO and head of the United Mine Workers of America, will endorse Wendell L. Willkie for the presidency and condemn President Roosevelt's ambition for a third term in a radio address to the nation Friday night, it was learned today.

Lewis will "go all the way," as did Sen. Hiram W. Johnson of California, last Friday night. Four years ago, Lewis went "all the way" for Roosevelt—in influence, speeches and contributions.

The CIO leader will deliver a 30-minute speech over the three major radio networks to explain his preference for Willkie over Roosevelt. It will be the third "surprise" attack on the third term campaign in two weeks, the first having been that of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and the second, that of Sen. Johnson.

Friends say Lewis will charge the president with breaking his promises to organized labor and with having created a war hysteria in America that may lead to the destruction of labor's hard-won rights. They add that Lewis will express fear that, if the third term tradition is destroyed, the United States will be plunged far down the path of dictatorship. They also point out that all labor rights are abolished in dictatorships.

Lewis, his associates add, will concede that Mr. Roosevelt secured the enactment of laws beneficial to organized labor during his first administration. But, they said, Lewis will add that in his second term, Mr. Roosevelt turned his back on organized labor, barred it from his council chambers and failed to solve the unemployment problem. He will then add that beneficial labor laws are worthless to the man without a job.

Simpson Receives 'Excellent' Rating, Praised by State

Mansfield's new John Simpson junior high school has been given an "excellent" rating among schools in the state by the state department of education, Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller told the board of education last night.

F. M. Shelton, representing the state department, who inspected the school late in September, praised the school in his report to the board.

He said: "You are to be congratulated upon the excellent, well-equipped new building that you have provided. As a result, we have little to offer in the way of improvements . . . the school is continued in excellent standing on the list of junior high schools approved by this department."

Supt. Miller said the Johnny Appleseed junior high school will be inspected by the state department later this year. Harry Dolson is principal at John Simpson.

LUCAS FIGHTS TO KEEP ONLY DOCTOR HOME

Petitions Sent to Washington as Town Protests Army's Call For Physicians.

COMMUNITY ALARMED

Mansfield Nearest Place For Doctor, Some Hope Medico Won't Pass Exam.

More than 600 residents of Lucas and Monroe township today were more or less secretly hoping that their only resident physician, Dr. Paul J. Lee, isn't in the best of health

Dr. Lee was called into military service this week as a reserve officer, leaving the community without a physician, but he still has to pass his physical examination.

"Maybe he'll be over weight," villagers opined hopefully today after most of them had signed petitions of protest against his induction into service. The petitions were forwarded to the war department. "Maybe he'll have a dental plate," others hoped, remembering that no one with dental plates are being sent to camp for military training.

Although Dr. Lee, a reserve officer, left Monday for duty with the 145th infantry, which will be trained at Camp Shelby, Miss., the petitions were circulated and have been sent to Washington in the hope that the order will be rescinded.

His induction for training leaves the community without a medical man, with Mansfield as the nearest point from which a physician can be obtained. Among his cases were several with heart conditions who have been upset by the knowledge that no physician is within quick call It was also pointed out that the basic charge for a visit from a Mansfield physician would be $5 and in many cases would run considerably higher.

Six years ago, just after Dr. Lee opened his office in Lucas, he was called into military service and assigned to a CCC camp At the close of three years service in the camp he returned to Lucas and again started in private practice, being the only doctor within a radius of eight miles

During the past few months Dr. Lee's new home in the village has been under construction, and last Friday, the day he was called to service, he had been established in his new home and new office just one week.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee also had recently taken an orphan boy into their home to assist him through high school.

KING ANNOYED

Iron Guards Bother Michael In Jewish Store.

BUCHAREST —(ANS)— An attempt by five Iron Guard legionaires to prevent young King Michael and Queen-Mother Helen from making purchases in a Jewish shop at nearby Brasov, caused a mild sensation today.

Vice-Premier Horia Sima, leader of the Iron Guards, called at the royal palace and apologized to King Michael for the incident.

It occurred while the young king and his mother were in the shop. The five legionaires stepped up to the king's aide, who was waiting outside, and demanded that he tell the king and his mother that they were shopping in a Jewish-owned establishment.

Election Bets Posted, Willkie Odds Favorite In One Of Them

With election only two weeks away, bets on the outcome of county, state and national contests, were posted today in several Mansfield cigar stores.

Few wagers, mostly small, had been made today, which might be viewed as significant in that Wendell L. Willkie, the G. O. P. standard bearer, was an odds-on choice to win the election.

One Democratic wager was $40 to $60 that President Roosevelt would be re-elected, which made Wendell L. Willkie, the G. O. P. standard bearer a 6 to 4 choice to win. Another bet of $50 even was posted that Gov. John W. Bricker will win by a majority of 150,000 votes.

Another $20 bet was posted that Bricker would defeat his Democratic opponent, Martin L. Davey, and $10 even money bets were placed on Roosevelt, Bricker, Frank Robinson, Democratic candidate for sheriff; Assistant Prosecutor Harold Lutz, Democratic candidate for prosecutor, and Howard Wenning, Democratic candidate for clerk of courts.

Although not posted it is known that one Democratic leader has wagered $1,025 even money that Davey will carry Richland county, while another $2,000 was being boasted by the party for Davey to sweep the state.

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN EN ROUTE TO CHICAGO—Wendell L. Willkie brought his presidential campaign into the Chicago area today just after he accused President Roosevelt of letting that city's Democratic organization and two others "try to steal the election for him without even a rebuke."

The Republican presidential nominee told an audience in the Milwaukee auditorium last night that his opposition uses "lofty talk and low performance," and added:

MURDER CHARGE

Clevelander Held for Shooting Daughter's Ex-Suitor.

CLEVELAND —(ANS)— Joseph Salupo, 65, today faced first degree murder charges in the fatal shooting of Alex Stowoff, 26, former suitor of Salupo's daughter, Mela.

Police said Salupo admitted killing Stowoff after the younger man threatened him with a chair. The shooting climaxed a long series of quarrels between Miss Salupo and Stowoff, police added, during which time Miss Salupo asked her father to protect her. Murder charges were placed by police yesterday.

Two of Salupo's sons are business agents for Cleveland labor unions while a third was killed, along with a girl, last year when the automobile in which they were riding was demolished by a bomb.

Democrats called it a campaign warm-up, but Republicans declared it was a "spark from Wendell L. Willkie's speech," that set off a blaze which swept Democratic campaign headquarters in the Richland Trust building yesterday evening.

Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, however, said he believed the fire, which destroyed office equipment and campaign literature, started from a lighted cigaret tossed into a corner by a careless smoker.

The fire was discovered by building employes shortly after 6 p. m. while party workers were at dinner. Hundreds of persons gathered at the busy intersection as smoke rolled from

Kennedy Starts Homeward From Post In London

LONDON —(U.P.)— United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy left for home today, and the glowing tributes paid him by British officials and newspapers had an air of finality, indicating belief that he would not return.

Kennedy left London by automobile on his way to Lisbon, to take a Pan-American clipper plane for New York.

It was reported that in his farewell visits in the diplomatic quarter, Kennedy had heard predictions from Balkan envoys that unless the United States entered the war by the first of the year, the chance of preventing Germany and Italy from conquering the Mediterranean probably would vanish.

The Balkan representatives were said to have told Kennedy that United States participation in the war would greatly encourage the menaced Balkan and Mediterranean countries.

Kennedy was said to have discouraged any expectation of the United States entering the war.

Declaration of War by Petain Cabinet Urged

Von Ribbentrop Reported Ready to Make Trip to Vichy in New Move Against Britain; Churchill Speech Seen As Appeal Against Action

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN — (AP) — The possibility that France may re-enter the war on the side of the Axis powers was foreseen here today amid indications that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop either is on his way, or is about to embark upon, a journey to the southwest, presumably to Vichy.

Secrecy surrounded Von Ribbentrop's movements.

(Dispatches from Les Verrieres, Switzerland, on the French border, quoted informed travelers as saying the Axis powers were attempting to persuade France to declare war on Britain by offering her comparatively easy peace terms. Vice Premier Pierre Laval was reported to be in Paris discussing the situation with Nazi officials.)

There have been rumors here for weeks of a pending amicable arrangement with France. For a fortnight the German press has refrained from saying anything derogatory about the vanquished nation

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill's appeal last night to France to refrain from doing anything that might hurt the British cause, finally gives substance, however, to recurring intimations that German negotiations with France have advanced to the stage where a visit by Von Ribbentrop may clinch them.

Whether Von Ribbentrop, if really bound for Vichy, will continue on to Madrid, also was a question for speculation in the German capital.

Inquiries of informed sources as to whether a visit to Moscow is also on the foreign minister's schedule were met only with shrugs of the shoulder and the reply:

"That comes later."

In a chain of circumstantial evidence, however, the following points may be mentioned:

1. Rumors concerning negotiations with France have been recurring here with frequency in the past weeks.

2. Hints by authorized sources that the Balkans are a matter of secondary importance to other events in the offing.

3. Unusual secrecy with which Von Ribbentrop's present movements are shrouded.

4. That fact that his press chief, Dr. Paul Schmidt, has also been out of town for several days.

5. Churchill's unusual appeal to France at this particular time.

In London, leaders have long since discounted the potentialities of French aid to Germany and Italy, however, especially at sea.

Much of France's navy, the second most powerful in Europe before the war, has been effectively crippled in naval actions at Oran, Algiers, and Dakar, French West Africa, or bottled up in Alexandria harbor and English ports.

Moreover, neutral observers doubted that France would fight against Britain, pointing out these factors:

1. Economically, France would be of little help to Germany. The vanquished republic has repeatedly been reported in desperate straits to feed her own populace.

2. As traditional allies of Great Britain, France's demobilized soldiery presumably would be loath to take up arms against British Tommies at whose side they fought

WRECKED: German Invasion Ports Reported In Flames

(By International News Service)

LONDON—The entire French channel coast is in flames and German-held "invasion ports" have been wrecked by British aerial and naval blows, it was claimed in London today as R. A. F. bombers and British long-range guns again hammered the German war machine.

At 9 a. m. (3 a. m. EST) British guns on the Kent coast began firing across the Straits of Dover, but a mist limited visibility and prevented observation of the targets.

Later in the morning, however, brilliant sunshine dispersed the mist and extended the visibility. The sea was calm and a light wind blew from the northeast.

The renewed shelling of German coastal targets followed fresh R. A. F. raids against the reich itself. These were announced in a terse communique which said:

"Although operations of R. A. F. bombers were considerably hampered by adverse weather conditions last night, attacks were made on objectives in Germany."

(In New York NBC picked up an official British radio broadcast stating that radio stations in Germany, Holland, Norway and Denmark closed down early last night, indicating that British bombers again were carrying out extensive raids over the European continent.)

The first sign of a German counter-blow this morning was an attack by a lone Nazi raider on a southeastern coastal town. A church, houses and roadways were hit by bombs and some casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, British press dispatches told of terrific damage to German-held invasion bases along the channel coast. The Daily Mail said the R. A. F. and British navy have wrecked the Nazi-occupied ports, all of which were reported in flames, and predicted the Germans may be forced to move out.

All last night, the Mail added, British bombers were busy continuing the previous night's at-

PRESSURE: Total Embargo On Oil To Japan Considered

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Further economic pressure by the United States against Japan appeared today to depend on the outcome of Japan's negotiations with the Dutch East Indies for increased supplies of oil.

There have been persistent reports here for several weeks—ever since President Roosevelt embargoed shipments of scrap iron and steel—that officials were considering an embargo on all petroleum products to Japan. It was authoritatively reported today that a total oil embargo, as well as an embargo on copper, steel and pig iron, still was being considered. At present only high test gasoline is on the proscribed oil list.

Officials believe oil is a more important and more explosive commodity in terms of international relations than gunpowder and that it may be the deciding factor in wars fought with machines.

This government has taken no official part in the Japanese-Dutch East Indies oil negotiations, but it was assumed that it would like to see the negotiations break down.

Some quarters believed that if Japan is denied access to more Dutch East Indies oil supplies and an embargo against all oil shipments from this country is applied.

Violent Quake Rocks Rumanian Capital and Oil Fields

FALSE REPORT OF 2ND SHOCK SPREADS PANIC

Tens of Thousands Flee To Bucharest Public Square To Escape Injury.

(By United Press)

BUCHAREST, Rumania.—Tens of thousands of men and women, frightened by one of the most violent earthquake shocks in many years, fled from their homes today and massed in the public square when a false radio report predicted a second quake.

It was feared that the quake may have done heavy damage in the Ploesti oil field area, though reports were fragmentary.

Bucharest suffered some damage. Seismologists said the quake centered near Busau, about 100 miles north of Bucharest.

First reports from Busau said that numerous persons had been injured by falling plaster. The prefecture, two churches, a chapel and a school were damaged and the people were panic stricken.

Bucharest residents ran from their homes when the first of two great shocks rocked the city. Then in mid-morning the radio broadcast that a second quake was expected at noon

Men, women and children ran from homes and offices and flocked to the great public square. They refused to leave until a second broadcast, an hour later, denied the prediction.

Telephone service was suspended in the Bucharest area for half an hour as the result of the quake.

The first of two shocks came at 8:30 a. m. (1:30 a. m. EST). These two big shocks were followed by lighter vibrations.

Bricks fell from the roof of the apartment house in which the United Press correspondent lives and a crack appeared in the wall of his apartment.

Terrified householders streamed screaming into the streets.

Dogs throughout the city began a crazed barking.

It was feared that damage had been widespread, especially to old structures.

The two big tremors occurred within 6½ seconds.

Schools to Have Earlier Holiday For Thanksgiving

Mansfield schools are going to observe their Thanksgiving holiday a week earlier this year to comply with the state and national proclamations setting the observance for Nov. 21.

The board of education authorized the change in the school schedule last night. Pupils will be dismissed Wednesday, Nov. 20, and will not have to return to school until Monday, Nov. 25.

The next school holiday, however, will be Friday, Nov. 1, when classes will be dismissed to permit principals and teachers to attend the annual meeting of the Northeast Ohio Teachers association in Cleveland, Nov. 1 and 2.

The school board last night voted to send John H. Eisaman, clerk of the board, as its delegate to the annual convention of the National Association of Public School Boards, Nov. 11-13, in Chicago.

When Mrs. Birch stepped out of her car at the Broad street entrance she found a $5 bill right at her feet on the pavement. BOARD SETS UP DRAFT POLICY

Teachers, Employes of City Schools To Get Year's Leave of Absence.

Men teachers and employes in Mansfield schools who are drafted for army training will be granted a year's leave of absence and their jobs will be waiting for them when they return, the board of education ruled last night.

The board's action followed a recommendation of Supt. W. L. Miller who said 72 of the more than 200 teachers are men. A large number of them registered last Wednesday and 12 of them who are unmarried may be called soon for military service, the superintendent pointed out.

The board's resolution includes school employes other than teachers, and it was expected that there will be enough of them to boost the total number of teachers and other employes to more than 100.

The action is in line with that taken by several industrial firms in the city which agreed to pay drafted employes a part of a year's salary and give them their jobs back at the end of a year unless circumstances make it impossible.

SAYS HOUSEWORK KEEPS GIRLS OUT OF PENAL INSTITUTIONS

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI — The national prison congress was given an "old-fashioned" recipe today for keeping girls out of penal institutions.

"Teach them to scrub, cook, serve meals and mend clothing," advised Mrs. Marguerite Reilley, superintendent of the Ohio women's reformatory.

Mrs. Reilley, who is the keeper of Velma West, notorious hammer slayer, asserted in a prepared speech that "one of the most glaring lacks of our present day society is that we have gotten away from the old-fashioned habits of home-making and housekeeping."

Deploring a "sad neglect" in the training of girls for "woman's work," she declared that her institution at Marysville, O., seldom receives a woman "who knows the art of housekeeping."

"The first step that is taught them on the road back," she added, "is how to scrub, cook, serve meals, mend clothing, be neat housekeepers and to do all the womanly things that were the pride and joy of our mothers."

The reformatory superintendent, who has 270 women in her care, emphasized the restoration of pride, self-confidence and personality in the rehabilitation of wayward women.

The reformatory, she related has three beauty shops in which inmates are required to obtain a hair-do and a shampoo at least once a week. Girls of good conduct receive permanents as often as necessary. All these services are free. Then there are gifts of cold cream, powder and toilet water for good behavior.

"You all know," she said, "that when a woman looks well, she feels well, and when she is conscious of this it logically follows that she does her best."

"Democracy so values the individual as to conserve even the anti-social in the hope of readjusting him to its objectives," James V. Bennett, director of the federal bureau of prisons, asserted last night in a presidential address.

He made recommendations to the organization:

Prison enlargement aimed at "smaller prisons for particular types of inmates."

Remedy of "appalling idleness in prisons" by education and trade training coordinated with industry.

Increased local assistance in rehabilitation of the discharged prisoner, "one of the most dangerous and . . . acutely pressing problems with which the society must deal."

GLATTKE ATTENDS

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Miss Midnight's Diary.

Dear Diary: Any day now, I expect Dorothy Lamour to come out with a declaration that the sarong is all right, but it will never take the place of the gingham kitchen apron.

I reached this conclusion after listening to the jungle glamor girl cooing about Greg Bautzer, her Hollywood beau, in terms that were strictly chocolate sundae. She was sitting in Leon and Eddie's with Wynn Rockmora, her manager, and although they were holding hands and looking love struck, they were only holding hands in the purest mutual sympathy, and their lovestruck expressions were the results of affections for two other people. With Dottie it was Greg. With Wynn it was Gertrude Niesen, whom he had left on the Coast.

Dorothy (who was wearing, not a sarong but a pompadour with rats) had pictures of Greg, which she kept whipping out and gurgling at, blushing all the while.

I will say one thing about the film studios and Dorothy. When they named her Lamour they knew what they were doing.

* * *

Just as Lamour was exiting from L. and E.'s, in strolled Zorina, just to keep the glamour situation at par. Zorina had four gentlemen with her, judging from the unhappy expression on husband George Balanchine's face, four was a crowd.

Balanchine looked so dejected he would have made a perfect model for one of those "Do your nerves jangle?" ads, and this was a shame, because there is plenty of Charles Boyer in Mr. Balanchine and it seems too bad that he has to go brooding through the swing joints.

The other three gentlemen were: 1) Robert Ritchie, the film executive (ex-beau of Jeannette McDonald and also a former swain of Lamour); 2) Pietro di Donato, dark and literary; 3) Harry Wilson, whose betrothal to the Stork Club dance floor is well known.

For some time Zorina seemed to be having the time of her life (aside to W. Saroyan: plug), then suddenly she began pouting. Sleuths for whose veracity I do not vouch unearthed the information that the owner of the most beautiful legs on Broadway was cross because she had discovered that her stocking had a run longer than Tobacco Road's!

* * *

All sorts of things went on at El Morocco in the midnight hours, including these fragments of action from the Manhattan scene:

A—Betsy (Mrs. Jimmy) Roosevelt, waltzing in with Harry Hopkins, gave credence to the rumor that there is romantic interest there. But between them walked Charlie Chaplin, who got snapped so often by photographers that finally he had to hold up his hand wearily and say:

"Enough, boys! I want to have a good time, I don't want to work any more."

C—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., long-distanced Washington from John Perona's private office and confessed he was very tired.

D—John Crawford said: "Oh, he's mad at me" when young Gilbert Haggerty's name was mentioned to her.

E—Bobby La Branche, Cafe Society's first soldier, came in wearing his private's uniform and a new dignity. When cameras were pointed at him he said:

"No photographs! No photographs!"

F—Mae Murray, who once earned $10,000 a week, came in with a run in her mesh stockings, and insisted on sewing it herself:

"Because I know how to do it so it won't show."

G—Arline Judge, who looked like a little red bird in a scarlet turban and gown, took from Ciro, the wine steward, his big silver chain, hung it around her own neck and danced in it, accompanied by James McKinley Bryant.

H—Charlie MacArthur, always gallant, kissed the palm of the hat check girl's hand, placed a quarter in it, made a low, sweeping bow, and exited.

* * *

The most squashing event of the week was the opening of the Algonquin Supper club with the inevitable throng of celebrities overflowing into the lobby; if the supper club were just an ordinary room with no spreading-out qualities, I am afraid some of the most elegant creatures in the night life set would have been drinking their highballs on the sidewalk.

* * *

Greta Keller maneuvered through the tables with all the dexterity of an Alpine skier and made the nostalgia-minded sigh with her Viennese laments.

Among those draped about the premises were Francis Lederer, who seems to be getting along without Margo, William Saroyan, who gets along without a number of things, including a plot and a close shave; Ernsrt Truex, pretty Jean Parker, Helen Menken, Nancy Carroll, Rochelle Hudson, Dennis King, Marc Connolly, Ralph Forbes and Ilka Chase.

A mild sensation was caused by Kathleen Talmadge, a model, who came wearing what seemed to be Turkish pantaloons!

* * *

Highlight of the week for this reporter was the opening of "Charley's Aunt" on Thursday evening. This reporter missed the original in 1882, but would like to report that the current version, with Jose Ferrer as auntie, is the funniest thing since "Life With Father."

* * *

Wilbur Feigenbaum talking about an 800-mile fishing trip into northern Michigan . . . Tommy Tucker getting ready to put a new coat of paint on the kitchen of his home . . . Neva Erwin placing little white letters on a big blackboard to list a downtown restaurant menu for passers-by. . . .

* * *

Fred E. Elder, teacher at Senior high school and scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 16, telling fellow teachers about the antics of certain members of his troop . . . Louise Grimes walking home after a day's work at Westinghouse . . . Katie Hartman taking orders for Charlie McKinley's book about England soon off the press . . .

* * *

Bea Colvin and a group of school associates having lunch together . . . John Jones in his usual hurry, dashing down Walnut street . . . The car of the Warren county sheriff parked on Main street . . . Jo Bushnell arriving home on a bus from Cleveland . . .

* * *

Fire Chief T. J. McFarland of Marion in town to spend the day with Mansfield's Chief Charles J. Seeburger and riding around over the town in the latter's bright red car.

* * *

Bill Mead (Gas company) telling friends he wouldn't want to live in Florida because it has too many snakes. "When I hear something buzzing I want to know it's a bumblebee and not a rattlesnake," he said.

Pupils Give Surprise Shower For Miss Lantz

A group of pupils of Miss Esther Lantz entertained her last night with a surprise handkerchief shower in honor of her approaching marriage to Harry Lytle. Arrangements were in charge of Sammie Kay Matthes. Prizes were won by Nancy Lee Clark and Tommy Bricker.

Refreshments were served at two tables decorated with pumpkin candles. Assisting Sammie Kay were Ruth Sweet, Mary Kay Berlo, Gloria Sellers, and Sharon Noll, Crestline. Miss Lantz and Mr. Lytle will be married Saturday in an open church ceremony at 2:30 p. m. at the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Mother Furious At Friend

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A 24-year-old girl, who seems to have troubles enough of her own on hand, now writes the column about an extra worry—her mother's lack of sympathy for the boy friend.

The facts of the case are these. The girl has been going "steady" with a young man of 28 for the past five years. The undeclared "steady" calls once a week, has Sunday night supper with the family, or he and the girl go on some outing. He's never breathed a word about marriage, unless his vague reference to their perfect companionship, even in old age, may be construed into some sort of long-distance proposal.

Her mother, who seems to be a practical sort of person, is infuriated with the "chair-warmer," as she calls the young man, and says, not without truth, that sort of man is "a barrage, smoke-screen and barbed-wire entanglement" against her daughter's meeting the right man and getting settled in a home of her own.

Now here comes the barbed wire. The girl is entirely and unselfishly in love with the man who is "wasting her time," as the expression goes. She says even if he has no intention of marrying her, she prefers his companionship to that of any other man she's ever met.

Her mother's railing against his stinginess cuts her to the quick, though to my way of thinking, mother seems to have some practical arguments on her side. This slow suitor never forgets her birthday. No, indeed. He sends her the nicest of cards. He is equally aware of Christmas, and gives her a box candy—three pounds of the very best. And so devotedly in love is this young lady that she never eats it all, but saves a few of the choicer pieces, from one year to the next, just as souvenirs.

It's a question whether anyone so completely hypnotized by another can have this spell of spurious enchantment broken. Every argument that her mother brings up is true. The world is full of just such cases, utterly selfish men who absorb a girl's youth, opportunity and generosity like a sponge, and then leave her in middle age for something fresher and fairer. And these later fancies they invariably marry.

Would that any word of mine could make this girl—and others like her—see the sense of coming out of her trance, drop the diliatory chair-warmer, make new social contacts, and charge up the affair to experience.

There is another phase of these perennial romances that go on interminably like a Chinese play. That is, that a girl's name becomes so linked with men of this type that a cynical world imagines she is his property and takes their association for granted. Her girl friends marry. They have their delightful enthusiasms over their new homes, later over baby showers and babies. The girl with the laggard lover has no part in these heart-warming experiences.

Red Cabbage Makes Pretty Dish

By BETSY NEWMAN

I often recommend white cabbage for a menu both as salad and cooked, but red cabbage has a slightly different flavor and makes a pretty dish, if you're interested in the esthetic side of your meal—as most modern housewives are.

Today's Menu.

Roast Pork
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Creamed Turnips
Red Cabbage Salad
Orange Cream Sherbet Cookies
Coffee

* * *

Red Cabbage Salad.

2 cups shredded red cabbage
½ green pepper
1 tart red apple
1 tbsp. onion
½ cup chopped celery
Salad dressing

Blend all ingredients and mix with French dressing or mayonnaise thinned with lemon juice. Chop and dice vegetables and fruit.

* * *

Orange Cream Sherbet.

¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup water
Grated rind 1 orange
1½ cups orange juice
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 egg whites
¾ cup cream, whipped

Make syrup of sugar and water, boiling to thread stage. Add the grated rind of orange and set aside to chill. Strain, add fruit juices. Turn into the ice drawer of the refrigerator to freeze to a mush. Remove to a well-chilled bowl and whip until light. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and cream. Return to refrigerator to complete freezing.

* * *

Best Ever Cookies.

1 cup sugar
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
2 cups flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. soda
1 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. milk
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup shredded coconut
1 cup raisins
2 cups cornflakes

Sift flour, measure and sift again with salt, baking powder and soda. Cream sugar and shortening. Add beaten egg yolks, then half of flour. Stir in milk, vanilla and remainder of flour, next coconut and raisins, then beaten egg whites and last carefully fold in corn flakes. Bake in moderate oven until nicely browned.

* * *

Fried Tomatoes and Scrambled Eggs.

8 thick slices fresh tomatoes
Salt
Pepper
Flour
¼ cup butter
8 eggs
½ cup milk
Chopped parsley

Salt and pepper tomatoes and dip in flour. Melt butter in iron or heavy aluminum skillet and fry tomatoes until browned and tender. With a pancake turner remove tomatoes to edges of hot platter. Now beat eggs slightly with milk, salt and pepper. Pour into the same skillet and cook slowly until firm but still moist. Pile in the center of platter and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Try serving tomatoes fried in this manner with steak or roast.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I did not know I had made any reply until the sound of my voice came back to me strangely.

"His word!" I repeated with infinite contempt. "Jack Leslie's word!"

"I know," he agreed. "It is worth absolutely nothing."

"And yet," Lillian said slowly, "You are inside this house for the next few days."

Even his iron composure was not proof against that thrust. He started violently, and his face suddenly had a purplish tinge.

"Lilian!" His voice was almost a shout. "Surely you do not think—"

"Keep the well-known shirt on, Phil," she advised, "and use the equally well-known bean. D'ye think if I had the slightest idea you were trying to play into Leslie's hands, I'd be talking to you? I'd be buzzing the Chief to throw you into a deep dungeon cell."

He gave a deep relieved sigh, but glowered at her nevertheless.

"You took ten years off my life with that last speech," he grumbled, and evidently meant it.

"You'll put it on again," she replied equably. "I'm just thinking things out, and they appear to point to an extremely commendable plan which you have evolved from the depths of your consciousness."

For the first time during our colloquy, Mr. Veritzen's eyes lost their tortured look.

"I'm glad you believe that I am not wholly a fool," he said.

"I found that out long ago," she told him with a cheery smile. "But now, before you spill your plan, which I know you have, I'd like to know how Leslie expected you to be able to engineer an entrance for him into a house as well guarded as this one?"

"I asked him that," Philip Veritzen replied, his speech and manner returning to normalcy under Lillian's banter, "but his answer bewildered me."

He stopped as if to ponder his bewilderment, and Lillian struck in impatiently.

"Well! what did he say?" she asked bluntly.

"He said," Mr. Veritzen went on slowly, "that he had his own ways of beating out the guard system."

"Oh! he has, has he?" Lillian said belligerently. "I'd like to see them in action. But if he believes that; which I doubt, where do you come into his picture?"

"He explained that," Mr. Veritzen said. "He said what he most wanted of me was to manage the admittance to the farmhouse of an aide of his who would know how to get signals to him."

"My sainted aunt's pet poodle!" Lillian exclaimed. "He knows the rigid guard that the Chief keeps over this house in this emergency. How in the hinges of the hot place does he expect an emissary of his to be admitted here?"

"I pointed that out to him," Philip Veritzen said, "and his answer was the most puzzling thing of all."

"For instance," Lillian prodded, as her old friend showed signs of again going into silent contemplation of his problem.

"He said that this contact person was some one very well known to me, whose entrance into the farmhouse would be most plausible if I did the vouching for it."

Lillian straightened as if somebody had touched her with an electric wire.

"Say that again!" she instructed, and with a lift of his eyebrows Mr. Veritzen repeated what he had just said.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, October 23.

Intrigue and surprise may dominate the affairs of this day, according to the lunar as well as mutual aspects of the higher octave planets. It is quite probable the personal life, social, emotional, domestic and romantic, may react to this obscure, vague, sudden and wonder-working stimulus rather than commonplace interests.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year calling for a high order of strategy, subtlety and cleverness in order to handle with discretion and prudence singular developments or entanglements in the private life. This, in romantic intrigues, sensational or mysterious, affecting the domestic or affectional ties. However such subtlety peculiar ingenuity and craft might be demonstrated in the realm of creation in art, literature, music or other form of romantic adventure.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally versatile, adaptable and skillful, probably in the arts, literature, drama, music or in scientific research or invention. Its private life may be spectacular.

Questioning Causes Deceit

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

When your child began to go to school, you realized that he would be away from you a great deal. You still desired to control him and to guide his conduct. Naturally you commanded him to do or not to do many things while at school and on the way. Just as naturally you would check on him by questioning him, to find out how well he had obeyed. For example, you told him not to go into the "sweet" store near the school and not to buy candy for lunch but to choose milk and vegetables. Later you tried to find out if he had obeyed.

Yet, as a rule, you had no way of knowing how accurately he answered your questions. Recalling your own childhood experience, you can be pretty sure he tended to grow practical and to answer in safe ways—to lie in short. With increased experience at meeting with rebuke and punishment when he reported accurately and escaping such penalties when he was more "practical," he easily may have grown very skillful at lying—you being the chief agent in teaching him to do so.

Third Degree.

You meet a similar problem when your son or daughter begins going out at night. Eager that their conduct while away shall measure up to your standards, you are prone to command them before they leave concerning their behavior while they will be away; then on their return, to put them on the witness stand. Before long you may suspect they are lying at times and you may try to force them to acknowledge having done so, tempting them further in deceit, therefore. Moreover, you may find them telling little or nothing of their experience away from home except what you wrench from them.

If, my fellow parent, you will think carefully through these matters, you will conclude with me that it hardly can be wise to command a child in your absence. Then you will find no reason to hold inquisitions which further cultivate deceit.

A better way is to say to the school child, for example, "I hope you will not go into that store," or, "I wish you would select milk and vegetables for lunch," and let it go at that.

Thinning Confidence.

Also as your boy or girl leaves home for the evening, it will be better merely to suggest occasionally that you hope for a perfect behavior score. If you wait up for him it will be to welcome him and enjoy the account of a good time, not to hold an inquisition.

Even when your child volunteers information about experiences away from home you will be careful not to condemn or rebuke. Winning youth's confidence and willingness to measure up to your standards in your absence is a fine art worth cultivating. We best control our children when absent by cultivating the kind of attitude and habits while they are with us which we wish them to have while away from us.

If you would like to have a selected list of books on guiding your child and happy family living, write me at 235 E. 45th St., N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope.

USE YOUR REPUTATION

FORTUNATE is the player who knows what kind of reputation he possesses with the others against whom he competes. It enables him to befuddle them by acting exactly counter to what they think he is doing. They are likely then to fall into traps which he sets, and may make exactly the move he hopes they will.

North in this game was well known to West as a trickster who is extremely fond of what he calls lead misdirecting bids. West therefore reckoned that North probably had a couple of little clubs and bid the suit on his first turn to prevent a lead of it. So What did West lead? You guessed exactly right—the ace of clubs.

Now just see what that did for the trickster in the North. His partner went right to work and made an otherwise impossible contract. The club lead was ruffed in the dummy, the heart 10 being discarded from declarer's hand. Then came a tremendous cross-ruff, with South trumping hearts and North ruffing spades, until finally the hearts were set up. Poor West took only one trick, with his diamond A. Had he laid that down at the start, he surely would not then have followed with a club. He would have had to play his heart A next, as the only apparent chance of setting the contract.

WOODEN NICKELS

RATON, N. Mex.—(U.P.)—The citizens of Raton are taking wooden nickels these days.

As a souvenir scheme for the Coronado Cuarto Centennial celebrations this year small wooden trinkets bearing information about the affair are being sold. They are redeemable at a local bank for the purchase price of 5 cents and are being accepted by Raton merchants as legal tender.

Drink Water for Beauty

By MME QUI VIVE

Older sisters in the beauty class probably bear with us when we lecture on the laws of health. We are well aware that the younger ones are looking for late bulletins concerning demountable eyelashes, rosebud ringlets and dizzifying nail polish; yet they could carry on the beauty campaign with speedier results if they would learn about the needs of the physical being. Good looks are built on the foundation of vitality. You can't get away from that. All healthy individuals aren't blessed with beauty, but to be attractive one must be well and strong, innards working normally, the avenues of elimination functioning properly.

So we ask: are you lapping up plenty of water each day? Or are you depending upon tea, coffee or ice cream sodas to quench your thirst? Nothing takes the place of water; a large part of the body is composed of it. Just as a bath is refreshing to the external surface so is water refreshing to the inner organs. It is necessary for the activities of the skin, the kidneys and the intestinal tract. Two glasses of water taken before breakfast will often overcome a stubborn case of constipation.

* * *

As water assists the blood to pick up and distribute nutritive elements, the thin girl who is wooing curves had better consider this means of coaxing the bathroom scales to give a better report.

Some beauty specialists believe that lack of water is the cause of premature wrinkles. We're passing this statement along for what it may be worth. We do know that the tissues of the face, like those all over the body, are composed largely of fluids. They need water if they are to remain firm and the skin must have it to carry on its work as an eliminating organ. Individuals who are afflicted with blackheads and pimples should be water babies.

* * *

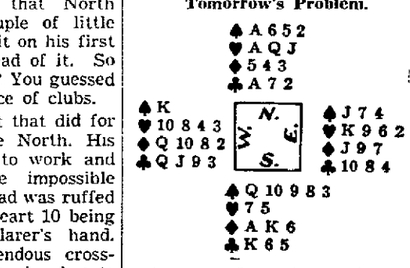
"Those whose tissues lack water look dried up," writes Dr. Charlotte C. West in her book "Ageless Youth." "And they are dried up, for the various functions of the system are but feebly performed. The face is usually thin, shriveled and wrinkled. These people lack the sparkle and transparency of clear water."

* * *

The woman who must feed her complexion quantities of oily cosmetics will find that her skin will be less flaky if she drinks three or four glasses of water each day.

Ice water is an abomination and an insult to the stomach, lowering the temperature of the flesh, slowing up digestion. Don't drink it. Or, if you must have ice, add only a small piece.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

After West's lead of the club Q, what is the best way for declarer to play his trump suit, in the endeavor to make 4-Spades?

West Jefferson's Team Has Chalked Up 15 Straight Football Conquests.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—If the lone traffic light in West Jefferson, 14 miles toward the sunset from Ohio's capital, happens to halt you some day, don't be surprised if one of the town's 1 300 inhabitants steps up to tell you about "our high school football team."

So far as the Madison county village is concerned, you can have Massillon, Canton McKinley, Toledo Waite, Toledo Devilbiss, Lorain, Columbus North and all the other powerhouses in the scholastic field. The West Jefferson boys wouldn't trade one of their second stringers (they have no third string) for the best player on one of the other squads.

* * *

Six victories in a row this year have run the W-J record to 15 straight conquests, and over that stretch the home boys have outscored the foe 442 to 13. Only 23 boys are on the squad, and only two of the substitutes are really capable of taking over when the regulars come out.

* * *

They have to chase cows off the field before they can get in their practice licks, and they do their dressing in the township hall, but when they get on that chalklined field they are all business.

Robbin Friday, captain and quarterback, is the big star. Last year he scored 100 of the team's 290 points, and this season he has rolled up 53 of the 152 the squad has scored. He'd do better, but he's on the heaving end of the pass attack.

Ralph Riddell native of Cincinnati and graduate of Denison, is coaching the West Jeff boys—and it's his first term as a grid mentor. Three more games are on the slate, but the West Jeff fans will inform you that their boys will be up there in the unbeaten-untied class when it's all over.

While West Jefferson was beating Groveport 27 to 0 last week, these clubs also snagged their sixth straight victory. Massillon, Tiffin Junior Home, Toledo Waite, Toledo Devilbiss, Newark, Versailles, Oxford McGuffey, Columbus North, Cuyahoga Falls, O S & S. O Home Xenia, Lorain Hudson Smithfield Bexley, Carrollton and Shelby

Four teams seeking to make it six in a row fell by the wayside for the first time, the list including Upper Arlington (O-Bexley 27), Dalton (0-Orrville 65), Fostoria (0-Tiffin Jr Home 14) and Newcomerstown (6-Carrollton 32) Canton McKinley after five consecutive conquests was tied 6-6 by Erie (Pa.) Academy

Marion Harding, unbeaten in 13 games, finally bowed out to Bucyrus, 16 to 6, while Lakewood fell from the clean slate class with a 12-6 loss to Cleveland Shaw

Mighty Massillon with a 66 to 0 romp over Steubenville ran its point total to 351 while holding the foe scoreless while Lorain unscored on in the first five games surrendered a touchdown and a safety as it beat Sandusky 19 to 9 It was Massillon's 29th straight win and Lorain's 20th. Toledo Waites 51 to 0 win over Toledo Central Catholic the worst defeat in that schools history, was the 17th consecutive victory for the Buckeye Bowl champions

Horace Gillom Massillon's All-Ohio end had a field day against Steubenville with four touchdowns, two on passes and the others on end-around plays for 26 and 17 yards That hiked his point total to 81

Piqua in nosing out Miamisburg 7 to 6 grabbed its 100th win since Coach George F Weitz of Heidelberg took over in 1925 He has 32 losses and 16 ties on the record.

* * *

Washington Courthouse, after winning four and tying one, waited until the last 30 seconds for a Charley Spetnagle to Jim Alkire pass to win again by 7 to 3. Newark, in beating Marietta 13 to 6 for its sixth straight, used two passes for an 80-yard march to the winning touchdown.

* * *

Andy Massuti of Girard a freshman making his first football start, was the week-end's tough luck star With Girard and Youngstown South knotted at 6-6 Massuti went in to left-foot a field goal to put his mates out front 9 to 6 only to have South turn a [illegible] pass interception into a touchdown and a 12-9 victory It was Massuti's [illegible] goal [illegible] instead [illegible] Frank Mezewell

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK— (UP) —My name isn't Diogenes, and I don't have a lamp, but I found myself an honest man today.

* * *

He is Mose Simms, who coaches the St. Mary's of San Antonio football team that is here to play Long Island university next Saturday.

* * *

"We play football to make money," Mose said in a loud clear voice and without asking me to step into another room. "What's more, very one of the 33 boys who made the trip from Texas were recruited. I know, because I have to do the recruiting that the alumni do at most schools. And here's something else—every one of the boys is getting tuition, room, board and books for nothing. We don't go for that hypocritical stuff of giving them phoney work like winding electric clocks and tearing the pages off calendars at 50 cents an hour. That makes liars out of the players and liars and fakers out of the school."

You cautioned Mose to talk softer, lest Ogden Miller of Yale overhear him and fall right against an ivy-clad wall from shock. But the Texan went right on.

"As a coach I'm a firm believer in giving a football player what he's worth. Most of them are badly underpaid. When a great back comes along and packs a stadium Saturday after Saturday I think he should get a little of the change We haven't much money at St Mary's but if we had it the boys would get their share.'

Mose can't figure out what harm is done by a boy paying his way through college with his athletic ability.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the boys on my team never would have gotten near a college if it hadn't been for football," he said "But we found them and now they are getting an education and enjoying travel around the country. Why isn't it a good thing for football to do this for a bunch of boys?"

Mose is equally frank about the coaching business.

* * *

A football team is in the amusement business. You charge for a show and you should put one on. It's a football coach's job to see that his team does

* * *

The St. Mary's team holds all records for travel. The boys get about the country in their own bus—a stream-lined aluminum monster that seats 53. Already the aptly-named Ramblers have played in Louisiana, North Dakota and New Hampshire.

Cornell Ranked on Top In Second Poll of Nation's Football Experts

Men Pick Michigan-Penn Tussle as Top-Notch Contest of Week.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (AP) — The nation's football experts, who seem to have qualms about ranking the top ten teams this week, shouldn't have much trouble agreeing upon Pennsylvania vs. Michigan as the week's most important game.

* * *

It's the only contest bringing together two teams in the first ten of the second weekly Associated Press poll. Michigan retained third place with 1,040 points and 18 of the 162 first place votes Penn, while not picked for first by any balloters, collected 539 points to take eighth.

* * *

Cornell, holding the top spot for the second week polled 83 votes for first place and a total of 1 473 points on the usual basis of ten points for first nine for second etc Still the Big Red powerhouse didn't finish far in front of Notre Dame On the strength of their 61-0 triumph over Carnegie Tech the Irish moved from sixth place to second with three first-place votes and 1 152 points The Texas Aggies, runners-up last week, slipped to fourth place with 1,037 They were picked for first by 15 voters

Others in the first ten were Tennessee, six firsts and 880 points; Minnesota, eight firsts and 817 points, Northwestern, 592 points, Stanford, 350, and Boston college, 334 points. Minnesota and Stanford advanced in the rankings last week; Northwestern and Boston college dropped back

The second ten is composed of Fordham, 501; Texas, 107, Clemson (one first), 86, Mississippi (one first), 80, Georgetown, 38, Washington, 28, Southern California, 15, Nebraska, 12 Southern Methodist, 11, and Columbia, 8 Scattered points were drawn by Penn State Ohio State, Detroit, Baylor, Duke, Navy, California, Mississippi State, Georgia Tech, Texas Tech Wake Forest, Missouri and Colorado

This weeks scramble figures to provide severe tests for all the leaders and perhaps produce some major changes in the rankings Cornell plays Ohio State, which looks a lot stronger than its five points in the poll and its two defeats indicate

* * *

Illinois may give Notre Dame trouble; Texas' Aggies tackle dangerous Baylor; Tennessee plays Florida; Minnesota encounters Iowa; Northwestern plays Indiana, and Stanford meets 12th-place Southern California. Only Boston college has a "breather," against St Anselm.

LAYDEN BUSY DIGGING UP ALIBIS FOR VICTORIES

NOTRE DAME, Ind — (AP) — While fans are hailing the Notre Dame team as one of the best Irish outfits on record, Coach Elmer Layden is busy digging up alibis It seems he said before the season that he would know after the third game how good his boys were.

Now he wants to wait until after Saturday's clash with Illinois because "Georgia Tech and Carnegie were crippled and not as effective as we expected them to be."

Stop Schuler Is Rams' Cry

Madison Squad Determined to Give Marion St. Mary's Trouble.

By BOB FLOHR

LINE CHARGING and more line charging will be stressed by Coach Al Fendrick at Madison high school this week as he prepares his Rams for the invasion of the Marion St. Mary's grid machine under the lights at the Madison field at 8 p. m. Thursday.

Coach Fendrick gave his varsity team a much needed rest yesterday while his freshman eleven invaded Shelby for a tilt with Shelby's freshman squad, but beginning today the varsity will get down to work in earnest

* * *

Charging of the Madison line has been the one big weakness this season, and beginning this afternoon Fendrick intends to see what can be done to bolster the line before Thursday's encounter with Marion.

* * *

According to Fendrick, Marion uses the same offensive and defensive type of play as did Norwalk high in handing Madison a 31 to 0 whipping last Friday, and therefore they expect to be ready for anything Marion might have to offer.

In addition to line charging, the Rams this week will concentrate on a way to stop young Tom Schuler, speedy left half on the Marion squad who almost single-handed defeated Crestline high earlier in the season

Schuler accounted for Marion's three touchdowns as his team whipped Crestline 20 to 0, and also added one of the extra points.

* * *

The same team that started against Norwalk last week will open against Marion Thursday night, according to Fendrick, with one possible exception.

* * *

Bill Fulmer, who has been ill for the past few weeks, is expected to return to his center post this week, and Jack Spriesterbach, who has been playing center, will be shifted to tackle.

Madison Freshmen Lose To Shelby High Team.

The Madison high school freshman football team lost its second straight game of the season yesterday afternon when it dropped a 25 to 7 decision to the Shelby high school reserves in a contest played at Shelby. The freshmen Rams scored their lone touchdown in the final period when Finley plunged over center after Anthony had carried the ball to the ½ foot marker. A Billy Wynn to Bottomley pass was good for the extra point. Shelby scored three times in the first period and once in the final. Earlier in the season Madison's freshmen were defeated 12 to 0 by John Simpson junior high school.

Others in the first ten were, in order, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Stanford, Texas A. and M., Texas U., Mississippi U. and Boston college.

Grid Briefs

COLUMBUS —(NS)— Despite consecutive defeats at the hands of Northwestern and Minnesota in the Big Ten, the Ohio State Buckeyes today were openly confident of winning from Cornell's undefeated eleven at Ithaca, N. Y., Saturday afternoon.

* * *

However, Coach Francis Schmidt was worried about the lack of left half back material. Dick Fisher, who has been playing regularly since Jim Straubaugh was shelved three weeks ago, will be unable to be in uniform Saturday because of a severe shoulder injury sustained in the Minnesota tilt.

* * *

Straubaugh will start against the Big Red, Schmidt indicated, but stated that Eino Sarkkinen, Fairport Harbor, O., and George Zavistoske would see a lot of action along with second stringer Les Horvath, Cleveland.

* * *

ITHACA, N. Y. —(NS)— Although Cornell is undefeated in 11 games, Coach Carl Snavely reported today that his squad was at full strength for the first time this season. The whole team, he said, will be set for the big test against Ohio State this week.

* * *

NOTRE DAME —(NS)— Preparing for their first road trip of the football season, which takes them to Champaign for the Illinois game this week, Notre Dame's gridders worked hard in practice today to win places on the traveling team. So many players have sparkled in the eleven's three victories to date that there is keen competition on the squad for "road team" places.

* * *

EVANSTON, Ill.—(NS)—A crippled Northwestern football team knuckled down to serious work today in preparation for the invasion of Indiana Saturday. Bill De Correvont, who sprained an ankle in the Wisconsin game last week, was said to be definitely on the sidelines for the Hoosier encounter. Fullback Don Clawson will skip heavy workouts and may be ready for the game, in which the Wildcats will seek their third Big Ten win.

LaChappeli Annexes Match

Defeats Angelo Martini In Feature Affair.

Turning apparent defeat into victory, Maurice LaChappeli of New York City last night won the "grudge" match from Angelo Martini of Toledo, the feature attraction of Bob Steele's weekly wrestling show, held in the Soprana-Doehla Athletic club hall.

Last week these light heavyweights battled and Angelo claimed the decision was unfair and asked for another match with the New York Frenchman.

LaChappeli won the first fall in 11 minutes with a rolling armlock, and Angelo took the the second setto by slamming LaChappeli against the ring post and then pinning him with a smother. Angelo attempted the same thing in the deciding fall but Maurice threw the Italian off balance and when Martini fell backward, "Frenchy" lit on top and Angelo was counted out.

Walter Miller of Toronto, Canada, and The Black Panther, Louisville, Ky., grappled one hour and Referee Frank Grassel decided the battle a draw.

Miller won the first fall in 37½ minutes with a double armleg lock. The Panther won the second by clamping Miller in a head-lock and bending him over his back. Neither grappler was able to obtain an advantage in the third stanza.

Promoter Bob Steele again took part in the show last night, meeting Speedy Martin of Flint, Mich., in the professional opener. Bob did not lose the match, but lost considerable blood in one of the gruesomest contests ever staged in Mansfield.

Early in the match Martin slammed Bob to the canvas so hard his nose was broken and the ring soon became a crimson sea. Steele fought galiantly and held the more experienced Martin to a 30-minute draw.

Two local lads gave an exhibition to ring up the curtain.

Life of Knute Rockne.

"Knute Rockne, All American," which is the attraction at the Ohio through Friday, immortalizes the great Notre Dame coach and tells the impressive story of his life from boyhood to the time of his death. Pat O'Brien gives a brilliant portrayal of the famous athlete, who did so much for the youth of the country. Gale Page has the important role of his wife, Bonnie.

As a co-feature, "Diamond Frontier" is presented, starring Victor McLaglen.

* * *

DOCTORS WARN FOLKS WHO ARE CONSTIPATED—

IT IS SAID constipation causes many human discomforts—headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness being but a few. BUT DON'T WORRY—

For years a noted Ohio Doctor, Dr. F. M. Edwards, successfully treated scores of patients for constipation with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now sold by druggists everywhere.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only gently yet thoroughly cleanse the bowels but ALSO assist liver bile flow to help digest fatty foods. Test their goodness TONIGHT without fail! 15c, 30¢, 60¢.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE— One Way. By Harold Gray

OH, I'VE HURT YOU TERRIBLY, AND I NEVER MEANT TO - BUT LEAVING SEEMED THE ONLY RIGHT AND HONEST THING TO DO--
THERE, PEG, I UNDERSTAND - YES - YOUR THOUGHT OF LEAVING US DID HURT - - - A LOT - 10-22-40
BUT REMEMBER, PEG, YOU CAN ONLY HURT THOSE WHO REALLY LOVE YOU - IF IT WERE BEST FOR YOU, BERT AND I WOULDN'T TRY TO STOP YOU--
NO - YOU'RE TOO WISE AND GOOD - FAR BETTER THAN I DESERVE -
WE HAD A SON, ONCE, YOU KNOW--HE WENT AWAY--- WE LOST HIM--WE DON'T ADMIT IT, EVEN TO EACH OTHER, PEG--BUT YOU'RE A WOMAN--YOU CAN UNDERSTAND THE HURT -
YES - I CAN UNDERSTAND -
LITTLE BILLY - WE LOVE HIM SO--AND HE IS SO FOND OF YOU--IF YOU GO, HIS HEART WILL GO WITH YOU, PEG - DON'T DO THAT, PLEASE - THERE MUST BE SOME OTHER WAY -
I WAS GOING ONLY A LITTLE WAY -

DECLARATION OF WAR BY PETAIN CABINET URGED

Axis Seeks France as Ally In War Against Britain; Von Ribbentrop Acts.

Move By Spain In 48 Hours Seen

BERLIN — (U.P.) — Nazi sources indicated today that important diplomatic developments concerning Spain and the Axis powers were likely within the next 48 hours.

Many reports of imminent developments circulated in usually well-informed quarters and some Nazis felt there was reason to believe that Spain openly might take a position more sympathetic toward the Axis within the next day or two.

Whether this new position would involve direct collaboration with the Axis was not known, but one source pointed out that the elevation of Ramon Serrano Suner to be Spanish foreign minister "justified the assumption that Berlin and Rome expect active sympathy from him."

(Serrano Suner, who is pro-Nazi, was made foreign minister after returning to Madrid from a visit to Rome and Berlin. At that time it was reported repeatedly by the Axis press that Spain was likely to enter the war on the side of Germany and Italy, but later the same newspapers said that Spain's position probably would not change immediately.)

Reports circulating in Nazi quarters mentioned the possibility of developments regarding Moscow as well as Madrid but best information seemed to indicate that any diplomatic change was most likely to involve Spain alone.

Gibraltar, the Nazi press pointed out, is important as a guardian of the entrance of the Mediterranean but the importance of the fortress in general and to Spain in particular "will be more evident when England is thrown out of the eastern Mediterranean."

(One widely-held theory has been that the long-promised Axis power offensive against Great Britain would involve a thrust through Spain at Gibraltar, timed with a German and Italian drive through the Balkans in an effort to strike at British sea power in the eastern Mediterranean.)

The visit of Heinrich Himmler, head of German police, to Madrid was believed to fit into any future developments in that direction although the only official information regarding Himmler was that he went to Madrid to discuss technical police matters.

Petain Opposes New War Step

VICHY — (AP) — Re-entry of France into the European conflict on the side of the Axis was reported strongly opposed by Premier Petain, but his vice-premier, Pierre Laval, was said to be discussing the question with Axis officials in Paris.

Only last night, Prime Minister Winston Churchill broadcast an appeal to France: "If you cannot help us, at least you will not hinder us," in "beating the life out of Hitler."

Churchill argued Britain intended to share her expected victory over Germany with France, while Germany sought to destroy the French nation.

The Axis scheme, reported by travelers reaching Switzerland from France, was said to call for a war declaration by France with the promise that she would lose only Alsace and Lorraine, Nice, Tunisia, Jibuti and colonies she gained at Germany's expense from the World war.

Tokyo diplomatic circles gave credence to a report that negotiations soon to be conducted between Japan and Soviet Russia to supplement the Japan-Germany-Italy alliance would be based upon a plan to partition the northwest territories of China to create buffer states between them.

Asked By Axis Soviet Consent

ROME—(INS)—Military moves in the southern Balkans planned by the Axis powers will be preceded by new negotiations with Soviet Russia, it was understood in Rome today.

Before Italy and Germany take any military action regarding Greece or the Aegean area it was reported an effort will be made to negotiate a supplementary political arrangement between the Axis powers and Russia covering possible eventualities in the Far East, the Balkans, the Black sea and the Dardanelles.

It was believed the new negotiations will be handled by high ranking Italian government officials who are expected to leave Rome shortly for an undisclosed destination, possibly Moscow. They also may visit Berlin and then Tokyo.

RELIEF DROPS

September Cost Lowest This Year for State.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The state welfare department today reported September relief expense of $1,807,237—lowest monthly cost of the 1939-40 biennium.

The figure represented a drop of $81,527 from August, and contrasted with the biennium's previous low of $1,836,575 in June, 1940. The state's $750,000 contribution represents 41.5 per cent of the total.

NAZI INVASION PORTS BOMBED

Entire French Channel Coast Reported In Flames After Attack By British.

tacks, which were perhaps the heaviest the R. A. F. has dealt since the war began.

According to the Daily Express the German radio station at Breslau broadcast details of a terrific fire at the French port of Le Havre, stating that the conflagration was so great it was impossible to attack the heart of the blaze and that the only hope was to control it at the edges. This account said every available man was fighting the fire.

All newspapers reported that yesterday the entire French channel coast appeared to be ablaze and that even at mid-day the intense glow could be seen from the English coast.

German raiders attacked London again during the night and also hammered other sections of England. But the capital's defenses functioned well and the closing hours of the attack were quieter even than those of the previous night.

U-Boat Campaign Reported Launched

LONDON —(INS)— The London Daily Mirror said today it had learned that a major German U-boat campaign has been launched against British shipping in the hope of starving England into submission.

The paper said more Nazi submarines have been ordered into the Atlantic ocean than at any time since outbreak of war to assist in the widest possible attacks against British vessels. German shipyards are rushing work on U-boat refittings, the Mirror added.

Terrific Attack Made On Tobruk

CAIRO—(INS)—A terrific British aerial attack against the Italian Libyan harbor of Tobruk and widespread air raids over great areas of Fascist Africa were reported today in an official communique.

Explosions rocked the Italian army barracks at Tobruk, the communique said. Bombs fell also among fuel tanks, which were rocked by one tremendous blast, it was announced.

Land activity on all fronts was quiet, the announcement said. RAF warplanes, however, kept up their relentless battering of Fascist strongholds, raiding Gura, Asmara, Agordat, Diredaua and Lagre. Fires were started and heavy damage wrought in the attacks against Gura, according to the statement which said all raiding aircraft returned to their bases.

Italians Stopped By RAF Attacks

LONDON—(U.P.)—Italian forces which a month ago invaded Egypt and failed to advance since beyond Sidi Barrani, only 75 miles from the Libyan frontier, have encountered serious difficulties, well informed London quarters said today.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's invasion forces have been forced to delay large-scale operations, the British said, because of the activity of British bombers and the general topography of Egypt's western desert.

The Italians are confronted with the problem of maintaining long lines of communications, the British said, and it was pointed out that their troops in Egypt and their bases behind them in Libya are under constant attack by the Royal Air Force.

It was said here that at present there are no signs of any immediate large movements in Libya. Italian land activity has been confined to forays by patrols in Egypt, into the British crown colony of Kenya from Ethiopia and into the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Seven British Vessels Sunk

ROME—(INS)—Six British ships were sunk and an 8,000-ton British cruiser was damaged in an Italian attack on an enemy convoy in the Red Sea, it was announced in Rome today.

LONDON—(INS)—Loss of seven British ships totalling 32,370 tons was announced today by the British admiralty, reviewing merchant shipping tolls during the week ending Oct. 14.

During that period, the admiralty said, three Allied ships totalling 17,537 tons and three neutral vessels totalling 13,358 tons were lost.

the top floor window while three companies of firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

Loss today was estimated at $200 by the Democrats. No estimate was given on damage to the building, although firemen said the interior of the offices were severely burned.

Atty. Marshal C. Moore, campaign chairman, said loss included office equipment and literature, both of which were being replaced today while workers moved into two other rooms.

Meanwhile, Democrats completed plans for a rally at John Simpson junior high school tonight at which Congressman Albert Gore, of Tennessee will be the principal speaker.

Roosevelt Plans Defense Tour

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt arranged to visit Wilmington, Del., and Camden, N. J., tomorrow prior to his address in Philadelphia.

Mr. Roosevelt's itinerary was announced by the Democratic national committee in New York. He will leave Washington by train and make a platform appearance at Wilmington. After reaching Philadelphia he will go by automobile to Camden to inspect the New York shipbuilding plant. Returning to Philadelphia, he will inspect the Cramp ship yards and Frankford arsenal and that evening speak in Convention hall, Philadelphia.

Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, told an audience at Mason City, Ia., that "the eastern financial interests do control the majority of Republican votes in congress and they will consent to no effective farm program, no matter what promises the candidates make.

LaGuardia Attacks Willkie Background

DETROIT —(U.P.)— Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York wound up a busy day, featured by five speeches and an altercation with a heckler on the city hall steps, by telling a mass meeting last night that Wendell L. Willkie lacked the proper background and attitude to be president.

Speech No. 4 produced the physical encounter. LaGuardia had finished his speech and invited questions. Benjamin H. Owens, 51, a bus repair man and Willkie supporter, asked the mayor if he were "taking orders from Boss Flynn."

Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national chariman, and LaGuardia, are neither political nor personal friends.

LaGuardia seized Owens, shook him, and demanded: "take that back." Policemen pried the mayor and Owens apart. Owens went to police headquarters. His shirt and tie were torn. He said he used to live in New York. Of his encounter with LaGuardia, he said, "I didn't think such a thing could happen in America."

Earlier, LaGuardia had addressed workers in three automobile plants. At the night meeting he said that Commonwealth and Southern corporation, during Willkie's affiliation with it, had abolished subsidiary company pension systems and that one of the companies had made large purchases of equipment "for offense against honest labor."

Camp Shelby Officers Attack Social Disease Problem

REPORT GIVEN ON CONDITIONS AT ARMY BASE

Regular Check of Water By Mississippi Health Officials Asked.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—A detailed report on health and sanitary conditions at Camp Shelby, Miss., base of the 37th Ohio army division, was submitted today to Governor Bricker and Adjutant General Gilson D. Light by Major Bradford V. Bevier of the Ohio national guard.

Major Bevier said there was no truth in reports that wooden water mains from World war days were still in use in the camp but observed the locations of the wells for water supply "is not in conformity" with Ohio public water supply requirements.

However, he added that in his opinion an "overburden of tight clay will probably protect this source of water supply." The mains are of heavy cast iron pipe, he added.

To insure the safety of the water, Major Bevier arranged for a periodic analysis of the supply by the Mississippi state health department.

Major Bevier reported a high incidence of venereal disease in Mississippi and said it was the only "problem" of epidemic diseases in the Camp Shelby neighborhood. In the county where the camp is located, 12 per cent of the colored population of 12,000 and one per cent of the white population of 24,000 has venereal disease, he said.

"For the control of this condition," the report stated, "the county is establishing for the present emergency three venereal clinics to forestall the spread of the disease as a result of the visit of the troops, local and military authorities plan to work in close collaboration."

Major Bevier reported proper sanitary regulation of food in the state and approved the sewage system at the camp.

He said the troops will be housed on wooden floors with tent frames covered by canvas from Ohio. Permanent structures will be wooden insulated mess halls and kitchens, latrines and bath houses and headquarters.

Major Brevier was sent by Bricker to inspect Camp Shelby when reports of the wooden mains were received several weeks ago.

BOY, 15, HELD AS PAROLE VIOLATOR

A 15-year-old Mansfield boy will be returned to the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster today as a parole violator, after his arrest following an auto theft. His alleged partner, Gaylord Bennett, 18, was placed under $1,500 bond yesterday in municipal court and bound over to the grand jury.

The younger boy has a record as a juvenile delinquent. He went to the Industrial school April 19, 1939 and was paroled to his parents in January of this year.

When picked up with the stolen auto, the boy told officers that they had broken into several places. A gun and large knife was found in their possession, Probation Officer Ralph Carrol said today.

SEEKS TO BE 'REINSTATED'

Osteopath Tells Board He Treated Grid Injuries, Then Was 'Discharged.'

Dr. Frank A. Hoffman, Mansfield osteopath, appealed to the Mansfield board of education last night to "reinstate" him as the physician for the Senior high school football players.

The board, however, referred him to the athletic council which employed Dr. Leonard A. Hautzenroeder several weeks ago, to treat players' injuries.

Dr. Hoffman told the board last night that he was "discharged without a reason" in September after treating the players last year by "mutual agreement with coaches." He said several of the players continue to come to him for treatment although they were instructed to go to Dr. Hautzenroeder.

Supt. W. L. Miller told Dr. Hoffman that it was impossible for him to be dismissed since he had never been employed by the board or the athletic council.

Supt. Miller, a member of the athletic council, said the council "wanted to place responsibility for treatment of players' injuries in the hands of a medical officer."

Dr. Hoffman pointed out that he was paid $72 last year for treating players and there were "no complaints then from the school board or the athletic council."

Supt. Miller explained that the school board "knew nothing of the payments until an audit of the athletic council's books was made this fall."

UP AGAIN

Sales Tax Revenue In County Increases For Period.

Sales tax returns in Richland county continued their upward trend in the first week of October, with collections totaling $13,659, as compared to $11,034 in the corresponding week last year.

The week's collections brought total receipts for the year to $437,758, an increase of approximately $65,000 over the same period in 1939. That represents a gain of about 17 per cent. The general increase throughout Ohio was only 12-1 per cent.

Ohio collections to Oct. 7 this year amounted to $37,750,811, more than $4,000,000 ahead of the corresponding period in 1939.

FAMILIES OF NAVAL MEN IN FAR EAST ADVISED TO RETURN HOME

WASHINGTON —(UP)— The navy department revealed today it has recommended evacuation of wives, children and dependents of naval personnel in the Philippines.

The recommendation was made to Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, who is now in Manila.

The department's recommendation was in accordance with the recent state department suggestion that all Americans who do not have urgent business in the far east return to the United States. Three ships have been dispatched to the Far East by the state department to assist in bringing American nationals home.

Navy officials emphasized that no formal orders to dependents of naval personnel have been issued. It was explained that it is impossible to force anyone to come back home but the recommendation is expected to result in a majority of the civilian group to take advantage of transportation facilities being made available.

DIMS HOPE FOR EARLY WORK ON CITY AIRPORT

Director Says WPA Interested Only In Grading, Leveling Mansfield Air Field.

Hopes for any immediate improvements of a major nature at Mansfield's municipal airport had been dimmed today by James L. Kelley, director of district Six of WPA in Ohio.

City officials drew this conclusion following a meeting yesterday afternoon with WPA officials who came here to discuss the possible improvement of airport facilities here.

Asked a week ago by WPA to furnish the agency with plans listing necessary improvements, airport officials yesterday placed two drafts before the group.

One called for improving present facilities and the other called for expansion of the field. Both included the installation of lighting the hard surfaced runways.

Kelley last week said that the plans were sought in connection with the war department's tentative schedule of locating two emergency landing fields in the 20-county WPA district, which would have included Mansfield and Springfield.

City officials said they were told yesterday, however, that the government would spend no money for surfacing runways or installing lights at the port. They were interested only in grading and leveling the port to provide adequate landing facilities for army training ships.

City Engineer W. C. Statler said the WPA officials accepted neither plan submitted to them. They asked instead, that an estimate be prepared for them on grading and leveling the port property.

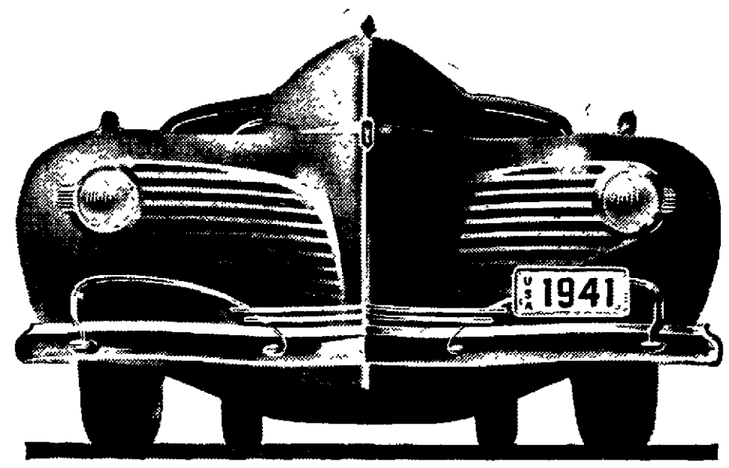
THE MOST IMPORTANT NEW CAR ANNOUNCEMENT DODGE HAS EVER MADE



DODGE presents to America a Great New Car with FLUID-DRIVE*

For 26 years, the public faith in the Dodge printed word has been a valued Dodge asset. Dodge has found it sound policy to make the performance of its cars exceed its promises in print.

The enthusiastic adjectives used in this advertisement represent no departure from this policy. They are used because the facts demand them.

This IS the most important new car announcement Dodge has ever made. This IS the story of the greatest car Dodge has ever built. To say less would be to slight the full and simple truth.

K. J. O'Neil

PRESIDENT DODGE BROTHERS CORPORATION

THE GREAT NEW DODGE for 1941 is longer, lower, roomier. It is completely re-designed; beautiful and distinguished in its sweeping new lines. It reflects what smart Americans call "good taste."

These things your eyes will tell you. But you'll need to "feel" as well as "see," to get the full thrill of the new Dodge Fluid-Drive.

Only by taking the wheel, on the road, can you experience the miracle of this new and wholly effortless way of driving.

Dodge Fluid-Drive frees you from the nuisance of gear-shifting and clutch-coddling. A touch of your toe on the accelerator or the brake becomes the complete driving operation. You use your hands merely to steer.

* * *

DODGE FLUID-DRIVE lets you start off in high and accelerate to top speed without shifting gears. It lets you slow down to one mile an hour... then move quickly through traffic without shifting. Halt at a stop light, then glide ahead without shifting or declutching.

You can climb hills at one to five miles an hour in high, come to a dead stop on the hill, then start up again ...still in high. You can creep through heavy sand, dig out of rutted roads, plough through snow...all without declutching or shifting gears. And without stalling the engine!

Like many truly great things, Dodge Fluid-Drive is simplicity itself in design and operation. There's nothing new to learn. You simply cut out two old and irksome driving motions... gear-shifting and declutching.

And when you want extra-fast getaway, Dodge Fluid-Drive gives you an EXTRA surge of power at a flip of a finger, in "second"!

* * *

IT IS OFTEN SAID that Dodge is one of America's most economical cars, in its consumption of gas and oil.

Now comes Dodge Fluid-Drive teaming up with Floating Power (which banishes engine vibration) to give you a new standard of silken engine performance. An oil-like smoothness that makes you forget that old mooted argument about the number of cylinders.

Now for the first time, you get the remarkable economy for which Dodge has always been famous, plus a new velvet-smooth flow of power that puts to shame many an engine with more cylinders.

* * *

THE 1941 DODGE was conceived in the industry's newest and best-equipped engineering laboratories. It is the result of years of testing and re-testing. Even such a factor as the type of rubber used in Dodge was specified as a result of research by our engineers.

And there are no less than half a hundred other new improvements in Dodge for 1941 that came from the minds of these same metallurgists, physicists and chemists.

We're tempted to tell you about all of these exciting innovations. But you'll get the thrill of them best if you go to see the car...and discover for yourself its vast wealth of new comforts, new conveniences, new luxury features.

* * *

A TRIP TO THE DODGE SHOWROOM will confirm every word of this message. A ride behind the wheel will supply an experience no words can convey.

No matter how much MORE, or how much LESS, you expect to pay for a car this year...by all means look at the big new...great new...dependable Dodge. Ride in it and experience the thrill of Fluid-Drive for yourself. Ask your dealer for a free book that gives you the inside story of the car.

Once you take the wheel of a 1941 Dodge with Fluid-Drive, we believe you won't be content until you own it!

*Fluid Drive optional at slight extra cost

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1940.

This is Anti-Noise week—quiet, please.

Among other effects of the war, it is now recalled that swimming across the English Channel hasn't been mentioned in recent months.

Low-priced turkeys are promised for this year's one or two Thanksgiving days — with possibility of cause for thanksgiving even earlier in the month.

As the Guardsmen Leave

ONLY the fact that this is a peace-time activity—a move toward better preparedness—makes the departure of national guardsmen from their home cities a somewhat less solemn occasion than that experienced in 1917 when young men were being called into almost immediate war service.

Now, for a time at least, the requirement is for a year's army training of men who have already served in a military unit and who have some knowledge of army fundamentals.

The thought cannot be avoided, however, that only under unusual conditions, fraught with national danger, would there be public sanction of such a drastic departure from customary procedure as calling guardsmen into federal service and resorting to peace-time conscription.

Nor can the implications of these rapid moves of the federal administration be escaped. It can mean only that, in the opinion of responsible heads of government, the United States has drawn very close to war and that extensive defense preparations are essential to national security.

Under such conditions the departure of the boys of our own Battery D, 134th field artillery, and preparations to draft others for a year's compulsory military training, causes memory to revert to the period preceding United States entry into the first World war—1916, when Woodrow Wilson was re-elected president by use of the campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war," and participation in the war came quickly thereafter.

In a situation such as this, with a vast majority of the people of the United States sincerely anxious to keep out of war, it is highly important that national leadership be sound, sane and competent. The lives of American young men and the future of the nation itself hang in the balance.

Learn About All Candidates

SO MUCH attention is concentrated on "the head of the ticket" in a national election, such as comes along two weeks from today, that many voters find it difficult to give more than casual thought to comparison of qualifications of opposing candidates for minor offices—state, district and county.

There have been instances in the past, and may be again, when totally incompetent persons have been carried into offices of considerable responsibility on a wave of partisan voting such as occurred in 1920, 1924, and even more notably in 1936.

While choice of a president may actually be of paramount importance, the fact should not be overlooked that the capable administration of state and county government is highly essential to individual and community well being, and that each of these units plays a definite part in the functioning of the nation as a whole.

Largest of the ballots which voters will receive on election day is the one devoted to selection of state, district and county officials, with five state offices to be filled in addition to that of governor, which heads this ticket.

Then comes the candidate of each party for United States senator; two congressmen at large; district congressman; two state senators and representative to the general assembly.

Rather inconspicuously, at the bottom of this ballot, are the names of Republican and Democratic nominees for eight county offices—all sufficiently important to warrant careful thought on the part of voters.

In the order in which they appear on the ballot these are: Two county commissioners, prosecuting attorney, clerk of courts, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, engineer and coroner.

Between now and election day it would be worthwhile for every Mansfield and Richland county voter to learn as much as possible about each of the aspirants for various offices—state, district and county.

Poland's Depressing Plight

AN AMERICAN correspondent writing from Warsaw, the Polish capital so terribly devastated by Hitler's first blitzkrieg that outsiders have been forbidden to see it, gives a depressing picture. It looks "like an untidy brickyard," he says. Bricks and building stones lie everywhere in the once beautiful capital of free Poland. There are great spaces yawning where government buildings and apartment houses once stood. It is blackness and ruin and desolation, yet with a large population still huddled wherever it can find shelter, and half a million Jews and Poles packed closely in a walled area.

The visitor saw some smiles there, and even heard music in cafes, but the general impression was of deep desolation.

Americans, into whose history are woven Polish heroes who helped us in time of need, hope and believe that Poland will rise again proud and free. If it were not for this hope, it would seem fitting that those ruins should be preserved forever as a monument to Adolf Hitler, the Destroyer.

More Attention To Rivers

AN INTERESTING feature of contemporary transportation is the way old routes and methods are being revived even as the airplane and streamlined railroad trains and busses develop. For example, there is a stretch of the Missouri river which has not been used for commercial navigation since 1918. It was re-opened and dedicated the other day. First to use it was a fleet of tank barges carrying gasoline and pushed not by the old stern wheeler of Mark Twain's day but by a smooth-looking, modern Diesel-operated tug.

There are other restorations of rivers which proceed slowly now but may be hastened by growing popular understanding. One is the restoration and conservation of streams for fishing, recreation and scenic beauty. The period of ruining them with all kinds of waste, using them for dumps, killing their fish and making them both unsightly and unhealthful for human use, has come to an end. It will take many years to undo the damage done by reckless pollution in the past, but a good start has been made.

Popular interest in the work may be stimulated by the series of books on the rivers of America, a number of which have already been published.

BOMBS BURSTING IN AIR

New York's Votes May Tip Scale

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—It looks more and more as if New York is going to be the real pivotal state in this election. Right after the conventions it appeared that the two key states were New York and Illinois. Then there was the alleged Willkie slump, with the Gallup poll indicating a landslide for Roosevelt. Next came the upturn in the Willkie hopes, with the polls giving the Hoosier candidate most of the Middle West.

Now of course the polls are indicating more violent fluctuations than are really happening. The writer has talked to a great many correspondent of big newspapers who have made a practice for years of visiting all sections of the country during campaigns for the purpose of writing forecast stories about the individual states. Not one of them believes that there has been any such downswing and ensuing upswing in Willkie strength as the polls indicate.

A consensus of expert views at the moment, as distinguished from polls, is about as follows: Roosevelt will carry all of the Solid South. Willkie will carry all of New England. Roosevelt will carry all the border states, from Maryland to Oklahoma including West Virginia. Willkie will carry all of the North Central states, from Ohio to the Dakotas and south to Kansas.

In the West, Willkie will carry Oregon, Idaho, Colorado and Wyoming, and Roosevelt will carry all the rest.

* * *

THIS would leave a situation, if we assume for a moment that it is accurate, where the 47 electoral votes of New York will decide the election. Of course this calculation also gives Pennsylvania and New Jersey to Willkie. If Roosevelt should carry Pennsylvania, he could lose New York and win, but the possibility of Willkie's carrying New York and not carrying Pennsylvania is remote. The same is true of New Jersey. If Willkie carries New York he will carry New Jersey.

Of course Willkie could easily carry Pennsylvania and New Jersey and lose New York. The Hague machine in New Jersey and the Guffey machine in Pennsylvania are nothing like the force that the Flynn machine is in New York.

So it boils down to this, that Willkie MUST carry New York to have a chance. If he does carry New York, he will probably be elected. If he loses it, he will almost certainly be defeated.

There are lots of possibilities, but no PROBABILITIES which upset this estimate of the situation. For example, there are reports from Missouri which indicate that the huge German vote in St. Louis and in the counties up and down the river from the city is going back to the Republican party this year. Based on this, and alleged dissatisfaction among the farmers, plus the disruption of the Pendergast machine in Kansas City and dissatisfaction over the nomination of Senator Harry S. Truman for another term, there are all sort of hope among the Republicans.

But it would be little short of a miracle if Missouri should turn against the Democrats this year, even with the help of the very substantial anti-third-term movement in that state.

* * *

SIMILARLY it would be little short of a miracle if Texas should swing to Willkie, or if California should turn on Roosevelt, despite Senator Hiram W. Johnson's smashing attack on the New Deal.

The probability still seems to be that New York is the state to watch on election night.

Listen World!

What to Believe

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I CAN'T," she writes, "believe in anything any more. This hate and horror and misery one meets on every side have wiped out every particle of my old-time faith. Yet some lucky people go along as cheerfully as if nothing had happened. I envy them; I wish I could see things as they see them."

You can! What's holding you? Only yourself.

"Belief" isn't something you're born with, lady, like a birthmark. It isn't the result of some special environment or glandular reaction. Nor does it "just happen."

WE BUILD OUR BELIEFS. WE BELIEVE WHAT WE WANT TO BELIEVE.

Fate doesn't doom us to see the seamy side of things. We ourselves choose to see those seams and dwell within their gloom. We deliberately collect evidence to prove that the world is going to the dogs. Yet, if we wished, we could as easily prove that "God's in His heaven and all's well with the world."

For if there's ugliness in the world, there's also beauty. If there's hate and cruelty, there's also love and tenderness, honesty, courage and generosity.

IN SHORT, THERE'S AS MUCH PROOF THAT WE'RE "GROWING BETTER AND BETTER DAY BY DAY" AS THAT WE'RE GROWING "WORSE AND WORSER." AND EACH ONE OF US POSSESSES THE POWER AND PRIVILEGE OF PICKING HIS SIDE.

As for me, I choose to believe that the finer things in life are infinitely more potent and important than the fouler ones, and a lot more fun to contemplate. That doesn't mean that I'm blind to the horrors that are happening. I admit they exist—and I'm doing my humble darndest to fight them. But I refuse to believe that such horrors will eventually triumph. And I'm sorry for the soreheads who do!

"But no one deliberately believes in ugliness," you protest. "What reason would they have for doing so?"

Quite a number of reasons, stranger—and all of 'em mighty useful in rationalizing their own laziness and self pity, cowardice and conceit. It's always much easier to knock than it is to boost—and far more popular with the other Crybabies and Lazybones. It requires intelligence to see the constructive side of things and fighting courage to have faith in the face of disaster . . . as well as endure the sneers which usually greet such optimism.

BUT ANY SPINELESS SNIPER CAN GRAB THE SPOTLIGHT, WITHOUT A SMITCH OF EXERTION, MERELY BY RIDICULING THE STATUS QUO.

How do I know? Because I've done it. And despised myself for doing so. For, in the end the Belittler always cheats himself. Whatever the ultimate outcome of our human struggle, it's much more inspiring to believe that we are the Sons of God, rather than a lot of fish-bait. We may not be going anywhere, as the cynics claim, but at least, we're getting a bigger kick while we're on our way.

So, long ago, I made a little credo to cure my own grouching. It's very simple, but it has yanked me out of many a cowardly flop—and may, perhaps, do the same for you. Unless you're hell-bent on keeping your nose in the garbage! Here it is:

My life is what I make it . . . I am what I believe and I can choose what I wish to believe.

I can choose to believe that life's a wash-out . . . or that it's a trail leading steadily up and on toward a nobler scheme of things. There's evidence on either side of the argument, and I can't prove either side. But I choose to believe the side which gives me the greater pride and joy!

SO HERE GOES, KID . . . HEAVE YOURSELF OUT OF THAT GUTTER AND STRUT YOU STUFF! IT'S AS EASY TO REACH FOR A STAR AS TO MOAN OVER A BANANA PEEL. ME FOR THE STAR!

Idle Hands Dangerous.

Says the head of the American Racing Pigeon Union: "Give the boy a pair of homing pigeons and you will never have to worry about juvenile delinquency; you'll never see him loitering around the streets, pool halls and other places."

It isn't arbitrary that it be pigeons, though they may do very well. It could be other creatures, or a craft, like airplane modeling, or any other thing that enlists the young interest and the natural desire to excel. Preferably it should be something with responsibility and a regular performance of duty attached.

The tragedy of many a child is parents with perfectly good hearts but no imagination, no capacity for providing opportunities for expression that give the child a focus for its restless energy. Too many of the idle hands for which the devil finds employment are painfully young. An intelligent parent will find some occupation for them first.—Detroit News.

Russia Again Buying U. S. Cotton; Await Reports On Draft Evaders

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Here is big news for the South. Soviet Russia is back in the American cotton market.

She already has purchased 58,000 bales, of which 18,000 are en route via Vladivostok in Greek ships, and has indicated the total orders may run as high as 500,000 bales.

To facilitate transportation, the Maritime Commission last week granted sub-charters to Amtorg (the Soviet trading agency) for three U. S. freighters, the Carleton, Export and motor ship Excelsior, which will load the cotton at Houston and Galveston.

The last time Russia bought U. S. cotton was in the early 1930's. Since then her own steadily mounting yield has been ample for her processing capacity.

Soviet economic statistics are secret, but U. S. experts estimate this year's Russian cotton crop at around 4,000,000 bales. Of this Russia has been selling an estimated 1,000,000 bales a year, a considerable proportion to Germany in barter deals.

Official Russian explanation for the U. S. purchases is that under the latest five-year plan, her spinning equipment is so rapidly expanding that she needs more cotton than she produces. According to the Soviet buyers their spindle capacity will reach a point in 1942 which will require a 40 per cent increase in cotton supply.

While delighted to have Russia buying cotton again, U. S. officials were curious about the possibility of the cotton reaching Germany and Italy. And so were the British.

The British "navicert" system, whereby shippers obtain advance permission to transport merchandise through the British blockade, does not yet extend to the Pacific. Also, cotton is one of the items not subject to embargo or state department license control.

The matter of possible Russian re-export of the U. S. cotton to Germany was one of the subjects discussed by Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Soviet Ambassador Oumansky, who gave positive assurances that the cotton was strictly for Russian use.

Draft Evaders.

THE ARMY is depending upon a novel type of enforcement agency to catch the draft dodgers. Most members of this unofficial agency are women.

Instead of sending sleuths around town to root out young men who have evaded registration, the army is counting on the mothers of conscripts to see that other mothers' sons do their patriotic duty.

If any man of conscript age has failed to register, the department expects his neighbors to tell the local draft board. Mrs. Jones may be proud that her son is serving the country, but she is going to make sure that Mrs. Smith's son does the same.

Actually, there has been more, rather than less, registration than expected. The crop of registrants last week exceeded expectations by at least 250,000.

One reason, officials believe, is that many men below 21 or above 35 registered, falsifying their ages; they wanted to serve the country, or they wanted a job.

Other reason is that the registration caught from five to seven million migrants not covered by the census. Every known hobo jungle in the country had been circularized in advance, and all the transients turned out to sign up with Uncle Sam.

Wage-Hour Violations.

CHIEF reasons why John L. Lewis has been teetering back and forth regarding support for F. D. R. are his complaints against the lax enforcement of the Wage-Hour Act and failure to deny defense contracts to companies violating the National Labor Relations Act.

A lot of CIO chieftains who lean more to the right than Lewis, do not agree with their bushy-browed boss about Roosevelt. But they are discouraged at what they contend to be a complete breakdown of the Wage-Hour Act in many industries, plus the Defense Commission's trampling upon the National Labor Relations Act.

Real fact is that charming Colonel Philip B. Fleming has not even taken the trouble to hire the inspectors voted him by congress, and turned back to the treasury last year $200,000 of unexpended funds which were to have been used to enforce the wage-hour laws.

Today, Fleming's labor critics charge that in order to cover up failure to enforce the act, he is trying to make a paper showing of efficiency by ordering each inspector to close three cases a day if he wants to keep his job. No inspector can work that fast and do anything more than perfunctory white-washing, labor leaders assert.

They also charge that the benign Colonel Fleming has exempted tens of thousands of employes in genuine wholesale establishments (on the ground that they were retailers), and has deprived vast numbers of agricultural processing workers, such as canners and fruit packers, of wage-hour benefits.

* * *

Many Resignations.

IN ONE case, they assert, a former strike-breaker, Walter LeMat, was hired by Fleming and given the job of devising procedures to investigate complaints. This caused William A. F. Stephenson, executive assistant to the administrator, to resign in protest.

With him have gone a long list of important executives who, either disgusted with the laxity of enforcement or genuinely interested in building wage-hour standards, have resigned. They include: General Counsel George McNulty, Chief Economist Carroll Daugherty, Assistant General Council Joseph Rauh, Assistant to the Executive M. C. Redman, and David Cobb, in charge of the apparel wage section.

Last week, Colonel Fleming chafing at the steady rain of wage-hour criticism which finally has found its way to congress, sent word to CIO leaders that he would like to sit down some evening and talk with them.

Note—Meanwhile it is reported that Deputy Administrator Baird Snyder, a former building contractor, under heavy fire from labor ranks, will resign.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Two years ago a play called "Family Portrait" came to Broadway. Financially, it wasn't very successful. This was a great pity. In many ways it was the most distinguished drama we have had in a long time.

The idea back of "Family Portrait" was to present Jesus as He appeared through the eyes of His own family. You never saw Jesus himself. You saw only His mother Mary, and His brothers, James, Joseph, Simon, Judah, and their wives. You saw His little nephew who sometimes wonderingly inquired "What has Uncle Jesus done now?" You saw the family, and the friends of the family, and those people who were His friends until they turned against Him.

* * *

ONE of this play's finest scenes took place in a distant inn, where Mary had gone because she knew Jesus had taken a room there. She hadn't seen Him in a long time. Jesus was always going off on His preaching expeditions, and His brothers were furious. Usually He left them with all the work to do.

At this inn she met up with a strange young man who said, yes, he knew Jesus quite well. When he spoke of Jesus a sort of fire came into his eyes. "For me," he said, "He is the beginning and the end. I would die for Him."

Just then three of Jesus' brothers came in. Mary is anxious to introduce them to this young man who speaks so fervently and eloquently of Jesus. She attempts to make this introduction, but pauses helplessly, realizing she doesn't know his name. Taking his cue the young man gets to his feet and bows. "Judas. I am Judas Iscariot," he says.

Here was a situation that dripped with dramatic interest. I was thinking of that scene last night as I watched a scene in another play, based on an incident in the life of Jesus.

In no way are these dramas similar. "Journey to Jerusalem" is the story of a journey Jesus made to Jerusalem with His family when He was only 12 years old. The idea of the journey was to celebrate the Passover. It was on this journey that this 12-year-old boy came into the realization that he was to be the Messiah.

There is one scene in this play that deals with the awful metamorphosis that takes place in His mind when He realizes that His is to be no triumphal procession, no shining armor, no crown of gems. The picture is one of a tormented little boy whose childish fancies have been crushed and who realizes that He is to be sacrificed, that He is to be misunderstood and reviled, and that instead of the glorious death His is to be an ignoble one.

* * *

IT SEEMS to me that this is one of the really superior moments of the theater. Such moments alone may justify a production. I do not know how successful, or visa versa, this play by Maxwell Anderson will be. Unfortunately, many people shy away from a play that has a biblical significance. It seems to be that in doing so these people unconsciously confess to limited imaginations.

This play has no "doth thous and thees." . . . It is colloquial. It draws perhaps a fine parallel between the intolerance of 2,000 years ago and the same sort of intolerance and its implications of today.

"Journey to Jerusalem" is no "Hi Ho, Silver" for action. It is, I think, a magnificent excursion into the realm of sober reflection.

This Is Ohio

AN EXACT estimate of the number of men who entered the Union army from Ohio during the Civil war is unavailable, but the official total compiled by the state adjutant general is 263,000.

This is not regarded as a complete picture, however. Five regiments credited to West Virginia were made up largely of Ohioans. The same may be said of two regiments credited to Kentucky, and of four regiments of Negro troops.

Thousands also entered the gun-boat service. Ohio has no record of them, nor of other thousands who enlisted in the regular army. Eighty-four out of every 1,000 Ohio enlisted men lost their lives in the war.

A Farmer's Diary

Stray Dog

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHEN my wife and I returned from town the other day, our oldest boy came down the road to meet us, trailed by his brothers. All were excited.

"Guess what we've found—guess what came out of the stubble field!"

As we drove up on the barn bridge we saw a pup—a brown and white spotted spaniel, with ears so long they hung below its neck. "We've named it Flappy—because its ears flap so," they said.

The dog was a female, less than four months old, I judged. Her teeth were very tiny. At first she was timid and seemed much afraid. But when evening came and the boy had milked, he filled a dish with fresh warm milk for the newcomer. Here we saw the full measure of her ears for they dipped into the surface of the milk, when only the flat pink nose should have been there. The three little boys stood on the doorstep in a row and watched the long pink lapping tongue and the rapid movement of the abbreviated stub of tail.

From then on Flappy was the center of interest. She ran in circles swiftly so that her ears stood straight out in the breeze like rippling flags. Her open mouth and panting tongue showed friendly lithe enjoyment. The lawn between the house and barn was the scene of acrobatic stunts, and merriment. Lusty shouts of laughter and quick metallic barks echoed shrilly back from the nearer gable.

That evening the maple leaves were falling like heavy snow flakes driven by the northwest wind. Almost buried in the ditch I saw the ten-year-old with the pup hard up against him, sitting almost covered with a dense shower of colored leaves. The thick mantle protected and kept them warm. As I looked on I felt a nearness to that youthful companionship so rare in all but children. Here was perfect satisfaction within a troubled world. Nothing more desired for the moment. No dreams of greater happiness than was found between the confines of that humble roadside ditch.

Its earthen walls were nature's artless murals. The scudding clouds above were blue and purple wind-swung molds. The roaring tempest among the shivering branches was a deep toned Aeolian accompaniment.

But companionship like this seems too sweet to long endure. Last evening there was a rap against our door. A neighbor asked if we had found a little dog. We went down near the pond and he called her name. Creeping along the grass she came as if begging forgiveness for running away. He took her in his arms to his waiting car.

"Can't I pay you for your trouble?"

"No indeed," I said. "We are the debtors."

CHAPTER XVIII

"She had rooms and clothes and I had a bath and went to sleep," Norma said. She leaned weakly against her father's shoulder, shut her eyes.

Philip's eyes met Jocelyn's. "I owe you an apology," he said. Jocelyn flushed brightly.

"That's all right," she said uncomfortably.

"You were there, and you took charge," he said. "And the boys started home ahead of you?"

"They were in their costumes. They were both sleepy and upset."

Philip shok his head, slowly. "Well, you've had your lesson, Spotty. You might have been in that car; you might be dead tonight. Now try to quiet down and get to sleep. I was up all night myself, and I feel groggy. I'm going to break up that poker party downstairs—none of the fellows will feel much like going on with it. I'll look in on you again in a few minutes."

He went away, and Jocelyn sat for a while with Norma Having recovered her self-control, Norma was in a manageable mood, broken and mild Jocelyn sat beside her and held her hand and found her for the first time a simple, natural, scared and honest little girl.

"Can't we—isn't there any way we can keep this out of the papers?"

"I'm afraid not, if Larry talked"

"They can't print it! Dad can stop them. I mean—everyone can't be talking about me." Norma said feverishly, her hands tightly holding Jocelyn's. "And my mother—my mother'll be wild Mother said that Dad couldn't take care of me, and now she'll think he can't, and I want to stay here, and now they'll all get started arguing—they're always talking about what to do with me—!"

* * *

Poor little thing, Jocelyn thought, as Norma gradually relapsed into drowsiness, into sleep.

Jocelyn overslept and guiltily rang for her breakfast at nine o'clock. Philip had gone; Norma was still asleep, but Mrs. Fordyce was walking about her room in great agitation, and her two callers, Nita Royce and a handsome efficient-looking woman of perhaps forty, was was introduced as Mrs. Verrinder, stared hard at Jocelyn as she came in.

"You sent for me?" Jocelyn asked.

"I've been lying awake practically all night," Mrs. Fordyce said sharply. "I suppose you've heard of the perfectly terrible thing that has happened? Miss Britton, I hold you—and everyone holds you—largely responsible."

"Holds me responsible!" Jocelyn echoed, proudly and angrily.

"The idea," said Norma's grandmother, "of permitting that child to start for Santa Barbara at that hour of night! She had been drinking, too, Phil tells me, which never should have been allowed!"

"But you were quite right, Bert," Nita Royce said soothingly. "She was much too young to go to that party. Poor kid! It isn't right that she should be submitted to all this miserable publicity."

"You knew that I didn't know they had any such plan, Mrs. Fordyce?"

"My dear Miss Britton, I don't know anything. I ate some poisoned fish at the club, and I was desperately ill at Mrs. Royce's house; how could I protect my own grandchild? We'll hear from Janet about this," Mrs. Fordyce went on ruefully to the other woman, "and of course I'll get the blame. All I can say is that if Miss Sanderson had been on the job it couldn't have happened. Because, I mean, it simply never did."

"It was just a wild idea of the poor youngsters," Mrs. Royce said. "Larry Bickford was telling Tom last night that he doesn't know why they did it, they just did it on the spur of the moment. "Oh, come on, let's go swim at Santa Barbara!' You know how it is. Like that awful party years ago when the men and women all changed clothes—"

* * *

For some reason this recollection did not appeal to Norma's grandmother, and she said hastily, "That was all nonsense. But at least we all—they all—were grown up! The thing is that Sandy never would have let Norma get into a condition when she would have considered such a thing. Mrs. Foster telephoned this morning—Sandy was with Doris and Yvonne until they got married, and she asked me why I hadn't kept Sandy, and why we'd given Janet a chance to criticize our way of handling Norma It's just about killing me, the whole thing And the Sears funeral tomorrow—that glorious strong boy—"

"You don't think," Jocelyn put into the tearful pause, "that Norma was at all to blame? For drinking when she had been forbidden to drink, for letting them talk her into such a thing?"

"No, I don't!" snapped her grandmother, and Mrs. Verrinder shook her lovely, smoothly curled head and said in gentle reproof, "I think we can hardly blame a child that age for a piece of folly, Miss Britton."

"No, we can hardly blame Norma; she's full of fun like the rest of the kids," Mrs. Royce added. "You've nothing to reproach yourself with, Bert," she added, to her hostess.

"I reproach myself for ever letting Sandy go! Poor Sandy, in a hotel on Post street that advertises that it has baths!" Mrs. Fordyce lamented. "Well, Miss Britton, we sent for you to discuss this with you. We don't think it's wise to keep Norma here for several days—possibly a week She ought to go to New York and have a lot of opera and concerts, but her mother's there, and that would mean trouble for poor Phil. He's simply wild about the whole thing says he doesn't know what to do—"

"A telegram, Mrs. Fordyce," said a maid

"Would you please read it, Miss Britton?"

Jocelyn took it, ripped it open. "It's signed 'Janet,' " she said. "'Absolutely horrified at this disgusting scandal.'" she read. "'Must insist that Sandy be given full charge of poor darling Spotty and if necessary both placed in some good school. Dull for Sandy, but I will make it up to her. Otherwise I will come at once to California to take charge which will upset my plans here Am sending Spotty two hats which she can return if she wishes Please inform me at once of what steps you take and get her out of the headlines' !"

"You see?" Mrs Fordyce asked spreading her hands, shrugging her shoulders helplessly "That gives me absolutely no choice But it means we have Norma to deal with!"

"I just waked up," Norma trailing in in peacock-blue and silvery-gray striped chiffon, looking pale and weary, and seating herself on her grandmother's bed "I wanted Miss Britton! Mattress said she was in here. When I was asleep," she said, with watering eyes, "I thought it was all an awful dream. But now it seems that—that Pon really is dead, and they'll all look at me, they'll think I'm an awful person—"

"Read this telegram from your mother," her grandmother said as she paused. "We know you weren t to blame, darling," she added. "We blame ourselves We never ought to have let our little girl get into such a horrible fix.'

* * *

Norma took the telegram and read it apathetically read it a second time. Her pale face flushed. To Jocelyn she looked young and helpless and pitiable—a little girl.

"I'll not go anywhere with Sanry. I loathe her!" she said.

"But darling, you can t go to Janet" Mrs. Verrinder said quickly and lovingly. "Isn't she going to be married to Count Spazzolari?"

"I don't want to see Sandy!" persisted Norma. "And I won't live with Mama and Mario, either! He kisses me and I hate him!"

"Hello, girls," Philip said in the doorway. "Dressed enough for me to come in, Mother?"

"Come in, dear. We're all discussing this thing, and there really doesn t seem to be any way out—there truly doesn't," she went on, with a deprecating smile for Norma, "except to—to make a change, and get our poor dear strict old Sandy back—she's always been so devoted, after all. Phil—"

Philip had taken a chair and Norma had gone over to get into his lap, and from the stronghold of his arms to look defiance at the court that was sitting in judgment upon her.

"I'll not go to school with Sandy as if I was a baby!" said Norma, in deadly finality.

"We've had a telegram from Janet, Phil," his mother said disconsolately. "I'm sure I don't know what we're going to do! She says it's Sandy or she'll demand Norma back."

"She can't have Norma back. Norma spends nine months a year with me," Phillip said, tightening his arms, as he read the telegram.

"Oh, I love you when you're kind to me, Daddy!" Norma, becoming artificial the moment she was made the center of attention, said effusively. He looked down at her thoughtfully, unsmilingly, but did not speak.

"Phil, isn't this awful?" asked Daisy Verrinder.

"Well, we all love this little girl, and we've let her get herself into an awful mess," he said in his kindest tone "It does seem to me that with so many of us here to look out for her we might manage better than we have. All I want for you, Spotty," he went on, "is to keep you happy and keep you safe and see that you have a reasonably good time until I hand you over to some better man. Now here's your grandmother, and here's Aunt Daisy and Aunt Nita all ready to lend a hand, and here's Miss Britton to help out, and one of the nicest crowds of boys and girls in the world to play with. What's the matter with us all that that isn't enough?"

"That is enough," Mrs. Verrinder said, perhaps really touched by this appeal, or perhaps, as Jocelyn uncharitably thought, just one more of the striking grass widows of the group who would have liked to play the role of the second Mrs. Philip Fordyce.

"I've been in town all morning," Philip said. "I've fixed everything as far as I can. I went to all the newspaper offices, made a statement that Norma and Miss Wilson and Norma's governess were all down there together, I've quieted it down as much as was possible. Nokes has put five plain-clothes men on the place, watching the gates, we won't have any photographers here The main thing is to wait until this all quiets down a little, and then start over"

"Yes, but there's Janet and what she says of Sandy! I cannot have Janet come on here, especially with one of those foreigners!" his mother said "You know how she upsets the whole place. Do think out something Phil! We can't just go on this way, we've got to wire Janet something that will be completely reassuring What can we say about Sandy? We could tell her she was dead. That would sort of quiet that down"

The Truth About Schools and Taxes

The Bricker administration is on the defensive along a broad front. So they have resorted to bald misrepresentation regarding schools and taxes, to divert attention from their tragic failures. Here is the truth.

Martin L. Davey

The Davey Administration gave the School Foundation Law to Ohio. Bricker, as Attorney General, sulked while this great work was being done. Davey opened the schools and guaranteed their financial stability. Davey gave definite State taxes to the schools. Bricker took these taxes away from the schools, and upset the program.

Davey left six and a half million dollars in the Public School Fund It was pledged by law to the payment of school notes. Bricker wrongfully took from the schools this six and a half million, and put it in his General Revenue Fund, to make his own budget look better. This was a grossly immoral act, even if it was done by law.

The democratic state platform says definitely that the obnoxious sales tax will not be repealed until a satisfactory substitute is found. Then, and only then, will it be repealed. The schools and every function of the State government will be protected. The schools will be safer under Davey, than under Bricker's financial juggling.

Certain lobbyists have been using the schools to keep the iniquitous sales tax saddled on the people. These lobbyists operate slyly behind the scenes. An officer of the Ohio Educational Association is said to be Bricker's choice for Director of Education, and he has lent himself to this campaign of misrepresentation.

Davey is a life-long friend of the schools. His administration pushed through the School Foundation Law, and saved the schools from their most serious crisis. This is the greatest thing ever done for the schools of Ohio. All school people owe a deep obligation to Davey, and will never be guilty of ingratitude.

Mark well this fact! The State of Ohio cannot tax real estate, without a vote of the people. The constitution forbids it. And the people will never vote for it.

Even your local officials cannot tax real estate more than one per cent of its value, unless you vote for it. Again the constitution forbids it. Real estate is protected by iron-bound conditions in the State Constitution—as it should be. See Article XII, Section 2, of Ohio's Constitution.

If anyone tries to tell you that real estate taxes will be affected by repealing the sales tax, or by any other State activity, tell him that he is, either inexcusably ignorant, or is resorting to a wilful falsehood. Tell him he needs to read the Ohio Constitution.

Martin L. Davey is one of the best friends the schools of Ohio ever had He is a deeply interested and sincere friend. His record and his pledged word guarantee the full safety of the schools.

VOTE FOR THIS PROVEN FRIEND OF THE SCHOOLS. VOTE FOR SQUARE SHOOTING. VOTE FOR INTELLECTUAL HONESTY.

Martin L. Davey

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1940.

This is Anti-Noise week—quiet, please.

Among other effects of the war, it is now recalled that swimming across the English Channel hasn't been mentioned in recent months.

Low-priced turkeys are promised for this year's one or two Thanksgiving days — with possibility of cause for thanksgiving even earlier in the month.

As the Guardsmen Leave

ONLY the fact that this is a peace-time activity—a move toward better preparedness—makes the departure of national guardsmen from their home cities a somewhat less solemn occasion than that experienced in 1917 when young men were being called into almost immediate war service.

Now, for a time at least, the requirement is for a year's army training of men who have already served in a military unit and who have some knowledge of army fundamentals.

The thought cannot be avoided, however, that only under unusual conditions, fraught with national danger, would there be public sanction of such a drastic departure from customary procedure as calling guardsmen into federal service and resorting to peace-time conscription.

Nor can the implications of these rapid moves of the federal administration be escaped. It can mean only that, in the opinion of responsible heads of government, the United States has drawn very close to war and that extensive defense preparations are essential to national security.

Under such conditions the departure of the boys of our own Battery D, 134th field artillery, and preparations to draft others for a year's compulsory military training, causes memory to revert to the period preceding United States entry into the first World war—1916, when Woodrow Wilson was re-elected president by use of the campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war," and participation in the war came quickly thereafter.

In a situation such as this, with a vast majority of the people of the United States sincerely anxious to keep out of war, it is highly important that national leadership be sound, sane and competent. The lives of American young men and the future of the nation itself hang in the balance.

Learn About All Candidates

SO MUCH attention is concentrated on "the head of the ticket" in a national election, such as comes along two weeks from today, that many voters find it difficult to give more than casual thought to comparison of qualifications of opposing candidates for minor offices—state, district and county.

There have been instances in the past, and may be again, when totally incompetent persons have been carried into offices of considerable responsibility on a wave of partisan voting such as occurred in 1920, 1924, and even more notably in 1936.

While choice of a president may actually be of paramount importance, the fact should not be overlooked that the capable administration of state and county government is highly essential to individual and community well being, and that each of these units plays a definite part in the functioning of the nation as a whole.

Largest of the ballots which voters will receive on election day is the one devoted to selection of state, district and county officials, with five state offices to be filled in addition to that of governor, which heads this ticket.

Then comes the candidate of each party for United States senator; two congressmen at large; district congressman; two state senators and representative to the general assembly.

Rather inconspicuously, at the bottom of this ballot, are the names of Republican and Democratic nominees for eight county offices—all sufficiently important to warrant careful thought on the part of voters.

In the order in which they appear on the ballot these are: Two county commissioners, prosecuting attorney, clerk of courts, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, engineer and coroner.

Between now and election day it would be worthwhile for every Mansfield and Richland county voter to learn as much as possible about each of the aspirants for various offices—state, district and county.

Poland's Depressing Plight

AN AMERICAN correspondent writing from Warsaw, the Polish capital so terribly devastated by Hitler's first blitzkrieg that outsiders have been forbidden to see it, gives a depressing picture. It looks "like an untidy brickyard," he says. Bricks and building stones lie everywhere in the once beautiful capital of free Poland. There are great spaces yawning where government buildings and apartment houses once stood. It is blackness and ruin and desolation, yet with a large population still huddled wherever it can find shelter, and half a million Jews and Poles packed closely in a walled area.

The visitor saw some smiles there, and even heard music in cafes, but the general impression was of deep desolation.

Americans, into whose history are woven Polish heroes who helped us in time of need, hope and believe that Poland will rise again proud and free. If it were not for this hope, it would seem fitting that those ruins should be preserved forever as a monument to Adolf Hitler, the Destroyer.

More Attention To Rivers

AN INTERESTING feature of contemporary transportation is the way old routes and methods are being revived even as the airplane and streamlined railroad trains and busses develop. For example, there is a stretch of the Missouri river which has not been used for commercial navigation since 1918. It was re-opened and dedicated the other day. First to use it was a fleet of tank barges carrying gasoline and pushed not by the old stern wheeler of Mark Twain's day but by a smooth-looking, modern Diesel-operated tug.

There are other restorations of rivers which proceed slowly now but may be hastened by growing popular understanding. One is the restoration and conservation of streams for fishing, recreation and scenic beauty. The period of ruining them with all kinds of waste, using them for dumps, killing their fish and making them both unsightly and unhealthful for human use, has come to an end. It will take many years to undo the damage done by reckless pollution in the past, but a good start has been made.

Popular interest in the work may be stimulated by the series of books on the rivers of America, a number of which have already been published.

BOMBS BURSTING IN AIR

New York's Votes May Tip Scale

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—It looks more and more as if New York is going to be the real pivotal state in this election. Right after the conventions it appeared that the two key states were New York and Illinois. Then there was the alleged Willkie slump, with the Gallup poll indicating a landslide for Roosevelt. Next came the upturn in the Willkie hopes, with the polls giving the Hoosier candidate most of the Middle West.

Now of course the polls are indicating more violent fluctuations than are really happening. The writer has talked to a great many correspondent of big newspapers who have made a practice for years of visiting all sections of the country during campaigns for the purpose of writing forecast stories about the individual states. Not one of them believes that there has been any such downswing and ensuing upswing in Willkie strength as the polls indicate.

A consensus of expert views at the moment, as distinguished from polls, is about as follows: Roosevelt will carry all of the Solid South. Willkie will carry all of New England. Roosevelt will carry all the border states, from Maryland to Oklahoma including West Virginia. Willkie will carry all of the North Central states, from Ohio to the Dakotas and south to Kansas.

In the West, Willkie will carry Oregon, Idaho, Colorado and Wyoming, and Roosevelt will carry all the rest.

* * *

THIS would leave a situation, if we assume for a moment that it is accurate, where the 47 electoral votes of New York will decide the election. Of course this calculation also gives Pennsylvania and New Jersey to Willkie. If Roosevelt should carry Pennsylvania, he could lose New York and win, but the possibility of Willkie's carrying New York and not carrying Pennsylvania is remote. The same is true of New Jersey. If Willkie carries New York he will carry New Jersey.

Of course Willkie could easily carry Pennsylvania and New Jersey and lose New York. The Hague machine in New Jersey and the Guffey machine in Pennsylvania are nothing like the force that the Flynn machine is in New York.

So it boils down to this, that Willkie MUST carry New York to have a chance. If he does carry New York, he will probably be elected. If he loses it, he will almost certainly be defeated.

There are lots of possibilities, but no PROBABILITIES which upset this estimate of the situation. For example, there are reports from Missouri which indicate that the huge German vote in St. Louis and in the counties up and down the river from the city is going back to the Republican party this year. Based on this, and alleged dissatisfaction among the farmers, plus the disruption of the Pendergast machine in Kansas City and dissatisfaction over the nomination of Senator Harry S. Truman for another term, there are all sort of hope among the Republicans.

But it would be little short of a miracle if Missouri should turn against the Democrats this year, even with the help of the very substantial anti-third-term movement in that state.

* * *

SIMILARLY it would be little short of a miracle if Texas should swing to Willkie, or if California should turn on Roosevelt, despite Senator Hiram W. Johnson's smashing attack on the New Deal.

The probability still seems to be that New York is the state to watch on election night.

Listen World!

What to Believe

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I CAN'T," she writes, "believe in anything any more. This hate and horror and misery one meets on every side have wiped out every particle of my old-time faith. Yet some lucky people go along as cheerfully as if nothing had happened. I envy them; I wish I could see things as they see them."

You can! What's holding you? Only yourself.

"Belief" isn't something you're born with, lady, like a birthmark. It isn't the result of some special environment or glandular reaction. Nor does it "just happen."

WE BUILD OUR BELIEFS. WE BELIEVE WHAT WE WANT TO BELIEVE.

Fate doesn't doom us to see the seamy side of things. We ourselves choose to see those seams and dwell within their gloom. We deliberately collect evidence to prove that the world is going to the dogs. Yet, if we wished, we could as easily prove that "God's in His heaven and all's well with the world."

For if there's ugliness in the world, there's also beauty. If there's hate and cruelty, there's also love and tenderness, honesty, courage and generosity.

IN SHORT, THERE'S AS MUCH PROOF THAT WE'RE "GROWING BETTER AND BETTER DAY BY DAY" AS THAT WE'RE GROWING "WORSE AND WORSER," AND EACH ONE OF US POSSESSES THE POWER AND PRIVILEGE OF PICKING HIS SIDE.

As for me, I choose to believe that the finer things in life are infinitely more potent and important than the fouler ones, and a lot more fun to contemplate. That doesn't mean that I'm blind to the horrors that are happening. I admit they exist—and I'm doing my humble darndest to fight them. But I refuse to believe that such horrors will eventually triumph. And I'm sorry for the sorcheads who do!

"But no one deliberately believes in ugliness," you protest. "What reason would they have for doing so?"

Quite a number of reasons, stranger—and all of 'em mighty useful in rationalizing their own laziness and self pity, cowardice and conceit. It's always much easier to knock than it is to boost—and far more popular with the other Crybabies and Lazybones. It requires intelligence to see the constructive side of things and fighting courage to have faith in the face of disaster . . . as well as endure the sneers which usually greet such optimism.

BUT ANY SPINELESS SNIPER CAN GRAB THE SPOTLIGHT, WITHOUT A SMITCH OF EXERTION, MERELY BY RIDICULING THE STATUS QUO.

How do I know? Because I've done it. And despised myself for doing so. For, in the end the Belittler always cheats himself. Whatever the ultimate outcome of our human struggle, it's much more inspiring to believe that we are the Sons of God, rather than a lot of fish-bait. We may not be going anywhere, as the cynics claim, but at least, we're getting a bigger kick while we're on our way.

So, long ago, I made a little credo to cure my own grouching. It's very simple, but it has yanked me out of many a cowardly flop—and may, perhaps, do the same for you. Unless you're hell-bent on keeping your nose in the garbage! Here it is:

My life is what I make it . . . I am what I believe and I can choose what I wish to believe.

I can choose to believe that life's a wash-out . . .or that it's a trail leading steadily up and on toward a nobler scheme of things. There's evidence on either side of the argument, and I can't prove either side. But I choose to believe the side which gives me the greater pride and joy!

SO HERE GOES, KID . . . HEAVE YOURSELF OUT OF THAT GUTTER AND STRUT YOU STUFF: IT'S AS EASY TO REACH FOR A STAR AS TO MOAN OVER A BANANA PEEL. ME FOR THE STAR!

Idle Hands Dangerous.

Says the head of the American Racing Pigeon Union: "Give the boy a pair of homing pigeons and you will never have to worry about juvenile delinquency; you'll never see him loitering around the streets, pool halls and other places."

It isn't arbitrary that it be pigeons, though they may do very well. It could be other creatures, or a craft, like airplane modeling, or any other thing that enlists the young interest and the natural desire to excel. Preferably it should be something with responsibility and a regular performance of duty attached.

The tragedy of many a child is parents with perfectly good hearts but no imagination, no capacity for providing opportunities for expression that give the child a focus for its restless energy. Too many of the idle hands for which the devil finds employment are pitifully young. An intelligent parent will find some occupation for them first.—Detroit News.

Russia Again Buying U. S. Cotton; Await Reports On Draft Evaders

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

She already has purchased 58,000 bales, of which 18,000 are en route via Vladivostok in Greek ships, and has indicated the total orders may run as high as 500,000 bales.

To facilitate transportation, the Maritime Commission last week granted sub-charters to Amtorg (the Soviet trading agency) for three U. S. freighters, the Carleton, Export and motor ship Excelsior, which will load the cotton at Houston and Galveston.

The last time Russia bought U. S. cotton was in the early 1930's. Since then her own steadily mounting yield has been ample for her processing capacity.

Soviet economic statistics are secret, but U. S. experts estimate this year's Russian cotton crop at around 4,000,000 bales. Of this Russia has been selling an estimated 1,000,000 bales a year, a considerable proportion to Germany in barter deals.

Official Russian explanation for the U. S. purchases is that under the latest five-year plan, her spinning equipment is so rapidly expanding that she needs more cotton than she produces. According to the Soviet buyers their spindle capacity will reach a point in 1942 which will require a 40 per cent increase in cotton supply.

While delighted to have Russia buying cotton again, U. S. officials were curious about the possibility of the cotton reaching Germany and Italy. And so were the British.

The British "navicert" system, whereby shippers obtain advance permission to transport merchandise through the British blockade, does not yet extend to the Pacific. Also, cotton is one of the items not subject to embargo or state department license control.

The matter of possible Russian re-export of the U. S. cotton to Germany was one of the subjects discussed by Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Soviet Ambassador Oumansky, who gave positive assurances that the cotton was strictly for Russian use.

Draft Evaders.

THE ARMY is depending upon a novel type of enforcement agency to catch the draft dodgers. Most members of this unofficial agency are women.

Instead of sending sleuths around town to root out young men who have evaded registration, the army is counting on the mothers of conscripts to see that other mothers' sons do their patriotic duty.

If any man of conscript age has failed to register, the department expects his neighbors to tell the local draft board. Mrs. Jones may be proud that her son is serving the country, but she is going to make sure that Mrs. Smith's son does the same.

Actually, there has been more, rather than less, registration than expected. The crop of registrants last week exceeded expectations by at least 250,000.

One reason, officials believe, is that many men below 21 or above 35 registered, falsifying their ages; they wanted to serve the country, or they wanted a job.

Other reason is that the registration caught from five to seven million migrants not covered by the census. Every known hobo jungle in the country had been circularized in advance, and all the transients turned out to sign up with Uncle Sam.

* * *

Wage-Hour Violations.

CHIEF reasons why John L. Lewis has been teetering back and forth regarding support for F. D. R. are his complaints against the lax enforcement of the Wage-Hour Act and failure to deny defense contracts to companies violating the National Labor Relations Act.

A lot of CIO chieftains who lean more to the right than Lewis, do not agree with their bushy-browed boss about Roosevelt. But they are discouraged at what they contend to be a complete breakdown of the Wage-Hour Act in many industries, plus the Defense Commission's trampling upon the National Labor Relations Act.

Real fact is that charming Colonel Philip B. Fleming has not even taken the trouble to hire the inspectors voted him by congress, and turned back to the treasury last year $200,000 of unexpended funds which were to have been used to enforce the wage-hour laws.

Today, Fleming's labor critics charge that in order to cover up failure to enforce the act, he is trying to make a paper showing of efficiency by ordering each inspector to close three cases a day if he wants to keep his job. No inspector can work that fast and do anything more than perfunctory white-washing, labor leaders assert.

They also charge that the benign Colonel Fleming has exempted tens of thousands of employes in genuine wholesale establishments (on the ground that they were retailers), and has deprived vast numbers of agricultural processing workers, such as canners and fruit packers, of wage-hour benefits.

* * *

Many Resignations.

IN ONE case, they assert, a former strike-breaker, Walter LeMat, was hired by Fleming and given the job of devising procedures to investigate complaints. This caused William A. F. Stephenson, executive assistant to the administrator, to resign in protest.

With him have gone a long list of important executives who, either disgusted with the laxity of enforcement or genuinely interested in building wage-hour standards, have resigned. They include: General Counsel George McNulty, Chief Economist Carroll Daugherty, Assistant General Council Joseph Rauh, Assistant to the Executive M. C. Redman, and David Cobb, in charge of the apparel wage section.

Last week, Colonel Fleming chafing at the steady rain of wage-hour criticism which finally has found its way to congress, sent word to CIO leaders that he would like to sit down some evening and talk with them.

Note—Meanwhile it is reported that Deputy Administrator Baird Snyder, a former building contractor, under heavy fire from labor ranks, will resign.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Two years ago a play called "Family Portrait" came to Broadway. Financially, it wasn't very successful. This was a great pity. In many ways it was the most distinguished drama we have had in a long time.

The idea back of "Family Portrait" was to present Jesus as He appeared through the eyes of His own family. You never saw Jesus himself. You saw only His mother Mary, and His brothers, James, Joseph, Simon, Judah, and their wives. You saw His little nephew who sometimes wonderingly inquired "What has Uncle Jesus done now?" You saw the family, and the friends of the family, and those people who were His friends until they turned against Him.

* * *

ONE of this play's finest scenes took place in a distant inn, where Mary had gone because she knew Jesus had taken a room there. She hadn't seen Him in a long time. Jesus was always going off on His preaching expeditions, and His brothers were furious. Usually He left them with all the work to do.

At this inn she met up with a strange young man who said, yes, he knew Jesus quite well. When he spoke of Jesus a sort of fire came into his eyes. "For me," he said, "He is the beginning and the end. I would die for Him."

Just then three of Jesus' brothers came in. Mary is anxious to introduce them to this young man who speaks so fervently and eloquently of Jesus. She attempts to make this introduction, but pauses helplessly, realizing she doesn't know his name. Taking his cue the young man gets to his feet and bows. "Judas. I am Judas Iscariot," he says.

Here was a situation that dripped with dramatic interest. I was thinking of that scene last night as I watched a scene in another play, based on an incident in the life of Jesus.

In no way are these dramas similar. "Journey to Jerusalem" is the story of a journey Jesus made to Jerusalem with His family when He was only 12 years old. The idea of the journey was to celebrate the Passover. It was on this journey that this 12-year-old boy came into the realization that he was to be the Messiah.

There is one scene in this play that deals with the awful metamorphosis that takes place in His mind when He realizes that His is to be no triumphal procession, no shining armor, no crown of gems. The picture is one of a tormented little boy whose childish fancies have been crushed and who realizes that He is to be sacrificed, that He is to be misunderstood and reviled, and that instead of the glorious death His is to be an ignoble one.

* * *

IT SEEMS to me that this is one of the really superior moments of the theater. Such moments alone may justify a production. I do not know how successful, or visa versa, this play by Maxwell Anderson will be. Unfortunately, many people shy away from a play that has a biblical significance. It seems to be that in doing so these people unconsciously confess to limited imaginations.

This play has no "doth thous and thees." . . . It is colloquial. It draws perhaps a fine parallel between the intolerance of 2,000 years ago and the same sort of intolerance and its implications of today.

"Journey to Jerusalem" is no "Hi Ho, Silver" for action. It is, I think, a magnificent excursion into the realm of sober reflection.

This Is Ohio

AN EXACT estimate of the number of men who entered the Union army from Ohio during the Civil war is unavailable, but the official total compiled by the state adjutant general is 263,000.

This is not regarded as a complete picture, however. Five regiments credited to West Virginia were made up largely of Ohioans. The same may be said of two regiments credited to Kentucky, and of four regiments of Negro troops.

Thousands also entered the gun-boat service. Ohio has no record of them, nor of other thousands who enlisted in the regular army. Eighty-four out of every 1,000 Ohio enlisted men lost their lives in the war.

A Farmer's Diary

Stray Dog

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHEN my wife and I returned from town the other day, our oldest boy came down the road to meet us, trailed by his brothers. All were excited.

As we drove up on the barn bridge we saw a pup—a brown and white spotted spaniel, with ears so long they hung below its neck. "We've named it Flappy—because its ears flap so," they said.

The dog was a female, less than four months old, I judged. Her teeth were very tiny. At first she was timid and seemed much afraid. But when evening came and the boy had milked, he filled a dish with fresh warm milk for the newcomer. Here we saw the full measure of her ears for they dipped into the surface of the milk, when only the flat pink nose should have been there. The three little boys stood on the doorstep in a row and watched the long pink lapping tongue and the rapid movement of the abbreviated stub of tail.

From then on Flappy was the center of interest. She ran in circles swiftly so that her ears stood straight out in the breeze like rippling flags. Her open mouth and panting tongue showed friendly lithe enjoyment. The lawn between the house and barn was the scene of acrobatic stunts, and merriment. Lusty shouts of laughter and quick metallic barks echoed shrilly back from the nearer gable.

That evening the maple leaves were falling like heavy snow flakes driven by the northwest wind. Almost buried in the ditch I saw the ten-year-old with the pup hard up against him, sitting almost covered with a dense shower of colored leaves. The thick mantle protected and kept them warm. As I looked on I felt a nearness to that youthful companionship so rare in all but children. Here was perfect satisfaction within a troubled world. Nothing more desired for the moment. No dreams of greater happiness than was found between the confines of that humble roadside ditch.

Its earthen walls were nature's artless murals. The scudding clouds above were blue and purple wind-swung molds. The roaring tempest among the shivering branches was a deep toned Aeolian accompaniment.

But companionship like this seems too sweet to long endure. Last evening there was a rap against our door. A neighbor asked if we had found a little dog. We went down near the pond and he called her name. Creeping along the grass she came as if begging forgiveness for running away. He took her in his arms to his waiting car.

"Can't I pay you for your trouble?"

"No indeed," I said. "We are the debtors."

CHAPTER XVIII

"She had rooms and clothes and I had a bath and went to sleep," Norma said. She leaned weakly against her father's shoulder, shut her eyes.

Philip's eyes met Jocelyn's. "I owe you an apology," he said. Jocelyn flushed brightly.

"That's all right," she said uncomfortably.

"You were there, and you took charge," he said. "And the boys started home ahead of you?"

"They were in their costumes. They were both sleepy and upset."

Philip shok his head, slowly. "Well, you've had your lesson, Spotty. You might have been in that car; you might be dead tonight. Now try to quiet down and get to sleep. I was up all night myself, and I feel groggy. I'm going to break up that poker party downstairs—none of the fellows will feel much like going on with it. I'll look in on you again in a few minutes."

He went away, and Jocelyn sat for a while with Norma. Having recovered her self-control, Norma was in a manageable mood, broken and mild. Jocelyn sat beside her and held her hand and found her for the first time a simple, natural, scared and honest little girl.

"Can't we—isn't there any way we can keep this out of the papers?"

"I'm afraid not, if Larry talked"

"They can't print it! Dad can stop them. I mean—everyone can't be talking about me" Norma said feverishly, her hands tightly holding Jocelyn's "And my mother—my mother'll be wild Mother said that Dad couldn't take care of me, and now she'll think he can't, and I want to stay here, and now they'll all get started arguing—they're always talking about what to do with me—!"

* * *

Poor little thing. Jocelyn thought, as Norma gradually relapsed into drowsiness, into sleep.

Jocelyn overslept and guiltily rang for her breakfast at nine o'clock. Philip had gone; Norma was still asleep, but Mrs. Fordyce was walking about her room in great agitation, and her two callers, Nita Royce and a handsome efficient-looking woman of perhaps forty, was was introduced as Mrs. Verrinder, stared hard at Jocelyn as she came in.

"You sent for me?" Jocelyn asked.

"I've been lying awake practically all night," Mrs. Fordyce said sharply. "I suppose you've heard of the perfectly terrible thing that has happened? Miss Britton, I hold you—and everyone holds you—largely responsible."

"Holds me responsible!" Jocelyn echoed, proudly and angrily.

"The idea," said Norma's grandmother, "of permitting that child to start for Santa Barbara at that hour of night! She had been drinking, too, Phil tells me, which never should have been allowed!"

"But you were quite right, Bert," Nita Royce said soothingly, "She was much too young to go to that party. Poor kid! It isn't right that she should be submitted to all this miserable publicity."

"You knew that I didn't know they had any such plan, Mrs. Fordyce?"

"My dear Miss Britton, I don't know anything I ate some poisoned fish at the club, and I was desperately ill at Mrs Royce's house; how could I protect my own grandchild? We'll hear from Janet about this," Mrs Fordyce went on ruefully to the other woman, "and of course I'll get the blame. All I can say is that if Miss Sanderson had been on the job it couldn't have happened. Because, I mean, it simply never did."

"It was just a wild idea of the poor youngsters," Mrs. Royce said. "Larry Bickford was telling Tom last night that he doesn't know why they did it, they just did it on the spur of the moment. "Oh, come on, let's go swim at Santa Barbara!' You know how it is. Like that awful party years ago when the men and women all changed clothes—"

* * *

For some reason this recollection did not appeal to Norma's grandmother, and she said hastily, "That was all nonsense. But at least we all—they all—were grown up! The thing is that Sandy never would have let Norma get into a condition when she would have considered such a thing. Mrs. Foster telephoned this morning—Sandy was with Doris and Yvonne until they got married, and she asked me why I hadn't kept Sandy, and why we'd given Janet a chance to criticize our way of handling Norma. It's just about killing me, the whole thing. And the Sears funeral tomorrow—that glorious strong boy—"

"You don't think," Jocelyn put into the tearful pause, "that Norma was at all to blame? For drinking when she had been forbidden to drink, for letting them talk her into such a thing?"

"No, I don't!" snapped her grandmother, and Mrs. Verrinder shook her lovely, smoothly curled head and said in gentle reproof, "I think we can hardly blame a child that age for a piece of folly, Miss Britton."

"No, we can hardly blame Norma; she's full of fun like the rest of the kids," Mrs. Royce added. "You've nothing to reproach yourself with Bert," she added, to her hostess.

"I reproach myself for ever letting Sandy go! Poor Sandy, in a hotel on Post street that advertises that it has baths!" Mrs. Fordyce lamented. "Well, Miss Britton, we sent for you to discuss this with you. We don't think it's wise to keep Norma here for several days—possibly a week. She ought to go to New York and have a lot of opera and concerts, but her mother's there, and that would mean trouble for poor Phil. He's simply wild about the whole thing, says he doesn't know what to do—"

"A telegram, Mrs. Fordyce," said a maid

"Would you please read it, Miss Britton?"

Jocelyn took it, ripped it open. "It's signed 'Janet,' " she said. "'Absolutely horrified at this disgusting scandal.'" she read "'Must insist that Sandy be given full charge of poor darling Spotty and if necessary both placed in some good school. Dull for Sandy, but I will make it up to her. Otherwise I will come at once to California to take charge which will upset my plans here. Am sending Spotty two hats which she can return if she wishes. Please inform me at once of what steps you take and get her out of the headlines'!"

"You see?" Mrs. Fordyce asked, spreading her hands, shrugging her shoulders helplessly. "That gives me absolutely no choice. But it means we have Norma to deal with!"

"I just waked up," Norma trailing in in peacock-blue and silvery-gray striped chiffon, looking pale and weary, and seating herself on her grandmother's bed "I wanted Miss Britton; Mattress said she was in here. When I was asleep" she said with watering eyes, "I thought it was all an awful dream But now it seems that—that Pon really is dead, and they'll all look at me, they'll think I'm an awful person—"

Read this telegram from your mother," her grandmother said as she paused. "We know you weren't to blame, darling," she added "We blame ourselves We never ought to have let our little girl get into such a horrible fix"

* * *

Norma took the telegram and read it apathetically; read it a second time. Her pale face flushed To Jocelyn she looked young and helpless and pitiable—a little girl.

"I'll not go anywhere with Sanry. I loathe her!" she said.

"But darling, you can't go to Janet." Mrs. Verrinder said quickly and lovingly. "Isn't she going to be married to Count Spazzolari?"

"I don't want to see Sandy'" persisted Norma. "And I won't live with Mama and Mario, either! He kisses me and I hate him!"

"Hello, girls," Philip said in the doorway. "Dressed enough for me to come in, Mother?"

"Come in, dear. We're all discussing this thing, and there really doesn't seem to be any way out—there truly doesn't," she went on, with a deprecating smile for Norma, "except to—to make a change, and get our poor dear strict old Sandy back—she's always been so devoted, after all, Phil—"

Philip had taken a chair, and Norma had gone over to get into his lap, and from the stronghold of his arms to look defiance at the court that was sitting in judgment upon her.

"I'll not go to school with Sandy as if I was a baby!" said Norma, in deadly finality.

"We've had a telegram from Janet, Phil," his mother said disconsolately. "I'm sure I don't know what we're going to do! She says it's Sandy or she'll demand Norma back."

"She can't have Norma back. Norma spends nine months a year with me," Phillip said, tightening his arms, as he read the telegram.

"Oh, I love you when you're kind to me, Daddy!" Norma, becoming artificial the moment she was made the center of attention, said effusively. He looked down at her thoughtfully, unsmilingly, but did not speak.

"Phil, isn't this awful?" asked Daisy Verrinder.

"Well, we all love this little girl, and we've let her get herself into an awful mess," he said in his kindest tone. "It does seem to me that with so many of us here to look out for her we might manage better than we have. All I want for you, Spotty," he went on, "is to keep you happy and keep you safe and see that you have a reasonably good time until I hand you over to some better man. Now here's your grandmother, and here's Aunt Daisy and Aunt Nita all ready to lend a hand, and here's Miss Britton to help out, and one of the nicest crowds of boys and girls in the world to play with. What's the matter with us all that that isn't enough?"

"That is enough," Mrs Verrinder said perhaps really touched by this appeal, or perhaps, as Jocelyn uncharitably thought, just one more of the striking grass widows of the group who would have liked to play the role of the second Mrs Philip Fordyce.

"I've been in town all morning," Philip said. "I've fixed everything as far as I can. I went to all the newspaper offices, made a statement that Norma and Miss Wilson and Norma's governess were all down there together; I've quieted it down as much as was possible. Nokes has put five plain-clothes men on the place, watching the gates; we won't have any photographers here. The main thing is to wait until this all quiets down a little, and then start over."

"Yes, but there's Janet and what she says of Sandy! I cannot have Janet come on here, especially with one of those foreigners!" his mother said. "You know how she upsets the whole place. Do think out something Phil! We can't just go on this way, we've got to wire Janet something that will be completely reassuring. What can we say about Sandy? We could tell her she was dead That would sort of quiet that down"

The Truth About Schools and Taxes

The Bricker administration is on the defensive along a broad front. So they have resorted to bald misrepresentation regarding schools and taxes, to divert attention from their tragic failures. Here is the truth.

Martin L. Davey

The Davey Administration gave the School Foundation Law to Ohio. Bricker, as Attorney General, sulked while this great work was being done. Davey opened the schools and guaranteed their financial stability. Davey gave definite State taxes to the schools. Bricker took these taxes away from the schools, and upset the program.

Davey left six and a half million dollars in the Public School Fund. It was pledged by law to the payment of school notes. Bricker wrongfully took from the schools this six and a half million, and put it in his General Revenue Fund, to make his own budget look better. This was a grossly immoral act, even if it was done by law.

The democratic state platform says definitely that the obnoxious sales tax will not be repealed until a satisfactory substitute is found. Then, and only then, will it be repealed. The schools and every function of the State government will be protected. The schools will be safer under Davey, than under Bricker's financial juggling

Certain lobbyists have been using the schools to keep the iniquitous sales tax saddled on the people. These lobbyists operate slyly behind the scenes. An officer of the Ohio Educational Association is said to be Bricker's choice for Director of Education, and he has lent himself to this campaign of misrepresentation.

Davey is a life-long friend of the schools. His administration pushed through the School Foundation Law, and saved the schools from their most serious crisis. This is the greatest thing ever done for the schools of Ohio. All school people owe a deep obligation to Davey, and will never be guilty of ingratitude.

Mark well this fact! The State of Ohio cannot tax real estate, without a vote of the people. The constitution forbids it. And the people will never vote for it.

Even your local officials cannot tax real estate more than one per cent of its value, unless you vote for it. Again the constitution forbids it. Real estate is protected by iron-bound conditions in the State Constitution—as it should be. See Article XII, Section 2, of Ohio's Constitution.

If anyone tries to tell you that real estate taxes will be affected by repealing the sales tax, or by any other State activity, tell him that he is, either inexcusably ignorant, or is resorting to a wilful falsehood. Tell him he needs to read the Ohio Constitution.

Martin L. Davey is one of the best friends the schools of Ohio ever had He is a deeply interested and sincere friend. His record and his pledged word guarantee the full safety of the schools.

VOTE FOR THIS PROVEN FRIEND OF THE SCHOOLS. VOTE FOR SQUARE SHOOTING. VOTE FOR INTELLECTUAL HONESTY.

GROCER'S Real Friend Of Family

Although countless thousands of families throughout the country can testify to the friendship of the grocer in times of financial reverses, it is almost impossible to determine the contribution of the grocer to the business and social life of the community.

In fact it seldom occurs to anyone that the average individual food merchant differs from any other type of small business man until actual comparison is made.

Because he deals with the necessities of life the grocer is in contact with the family more frequently than any other type of business or professional man. It is only natural that such daily contacts usually ripen into deep friendship, so that regardless of where one travels in America, investigation will reveal that the grocer is closer to more people than anyone else in the community.

It is the individual grocer who is called on for advice or counsel concerning the various family problems. When financial distress pinches the pocketbook he often continues the extension of credit.

However, it is in the operation of his business that the individual retail grocer excels. Being his own boss he can render the personalized service preferred by every housewife.

If certain brands or varieties of products are sought by consumers it is the individual grocer who can and does go out of his way to cater to every personal whim in respect to food products.

Millions of housewives laud the time and energy-saving delivery service of the individual grocer. In purchasing food supplies it isn't necessary these days for a consumer to spend two or three hours in a jostling crowd.

Nor is it essential for consumers to undergo the expense of operating pleasure automobiles to haul food supplies to the home. The individual grocer relieves the consumer of this expense and trouble by delivering the choicest foods to the kitchen door.

The work of the retail grocers in behalf of the farmers is a story in itself. The power and size of the non-profit Independent Distributors Council consisting of 153,000 grocers is almost beyond comprehension. Yet this giant marketing organization has quietly functioned for nearly three years, staging frequent nation-wide sales drives whenever surplus crops threatened the welfare of the producers.

OHIO EDUCATORS TO STUDY SENIOR HIGH IN ACTION

Group of 50 To Make 3-Day Check, Advise Officials Here of Findings.

Between 50 and 60 Ohio educators will come to Mansfield Nov. 25 to make a three-day study of class room activities and equipment at Mansfield Senior high school, Jesse Beer, principal announced today.

Those making the survey are the members of Evaluative committee for the North Central association of Colleges and Secondary schools and members of the department of education of Ohio State university.

During the three days spent at the school the two groups will inspect the shops, library, laboratories, lighting system, grounds, transportation, cafeteria and every phase of the educative process, Beer said.

At the end of the three-day session, the school will be graded on the basis of their findings and reports will be placed in the hands of school officials.

Among the inspecting group three types of educators will be represented—educators of college level, administrators, and subject matter specialists.

Professors from Ohio State university, Western Reserve, Bowling Green, Ashland college, Kent State university, and the University of Toledo will represent those in the "college" class. High school principals and superintendents of schools from throughout the state will make up the "administrator" class.

Subject matter specialists will include teachers and professors who specialize in the various subjects taught at the school, Beer stated.

A preliminary meeting will be held on the opening day and on Nov. 26 and on the morning of Nov. 27 the group will visit classes. On the afternoon of Nov. 27 the educators will inspect the physical equipment of the school.

Dr. D. H. Eikenberry of the department of education of Ohio State university will be in complete charge of the evaluation.

Heading the committee from the state department of education will be F. M Shelton, while Orin B. Graff will head the delegation from the department of education, Ohio State university.

Taking Part In Grocers' Week

GROCERY DISTRIBUTION PLAN DEVELOPED IN MASSACHUSETTS

Forerunner of the modern grocery distribution system developed in the region of Massachusetts Bay very shortly after the arrival of the Pilgrims in 1620. Its inception began more than 300 years ago in the early colonial storehouses of New England.

The development, of course, has been through avenues of evolution, which in turn followed the twists and angles of early settlements and penetrations of the wilderness by audacious pioneers.

It came into being as soon as the earliest settlers were able to organize the raising of summer crops and get orderly fishing and hunting established.

Development of marine communications with the old world and the West Indies set up what we describe as "trade" and as soon as trade was assured local markets came into being.

According to historical research by the National Association of Retail Grocers, the early market centers were not very highly organized. The markets included every sort of merchandise in "general stores."

Very gradually these trading posts divided into specialized lines. The process was retarded by existing conditions, such as the pushing out into the wilderness of trading posts to develop the native Indian patronage. These posts, obviously, were under necessity of carrying in stock all sorts of commodities.

Those engaged in trade did not get into specialization of lines until the populations along the Atlantic coast had become quite definitely settled into permanent communities and the affairs of business into well defined grooves. Thus it was probably no earlier than the latter part of the century that grocery specialists came into existence to serve the retail trade.

As the population grew in the country and the density increased on the Atlantic shores the settlements became more and more organized in business and social contacts and business began to take permanent form. One of the earlier departures was the segregation of food distribution as a separate form from that of clothing, equipment and household requirements, the arts and luxuries.

Despite its early start, however, the grocery stumbled rather blindly through three centuries of time without achieving a development that today we regard as being worthy of such an important service to all human beings.

Through the generations the grocery store was regarded with something of joking toleration. The relation of the grocery to public health and well being apparently was not considered seriously.

However, with the scientific analyses of causes of disease and various forms of ill health there gradually arose a sense of the importance of care in the handling of food assembly and distribution. Since the turn of the century tremendous strides have been made in the methods of preparation, handling and distribution of foods and with those strides there has developed a demand for form in this trade which is representative of the newer conception of food values.

City Retailers to Stage Annual Dinner Tonight

Approximately 140 Mansfield merchants, members of the Retail Merchants' association, will lay aside their business worries tonight to attend the organization's annual dinner-meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Principal speaker at the banquet will be James E. Gheen, New York City, nationally known dinner speaker and humorist. Gheen spoke before the association a year ago. His topic will be "Laughing at Yourself."

In addition, the association will also elect three trustees to the board of directors to succeed those whose three year terms expire this year.

Retiring trustees are John W Graham, M. Vale Scouten and Harry Frick. The other members are Ray Calene, president; Joy Herbert, L. A. Ott, William Ross, J. H. Blahnik and Merle Pecht.

TALK TONIGHT

"What Will Be the Condition of the Body After Resurrection?" will be the subject under discussion at the Union Gospel Chapel at 7:30 p. m. today, with Mr. and Mrs Charles Young leading the discussion.

Tonight's meeting is the third in a series of a week's meetings which began Sunday. Services will be held each evening at 7:30 during the week.

IT PAYS TO KNOW YOUR SQUARE DEAL GROCER!

The growth of modern civilization can be traced not too indirectly to the growth of the modern grocer and the ease with which men were enabled to obtain food. For no great cities were built, no great works of art were created when men were obliged to hunt down their every meal. It was not until people were furnished with convenient, satisfying sources of foodstuffs that they were able to turn their energies to other things.

At this time it is wise to stop and consider the part your grocer plays in modern life . . . the things his existence enables you to do . . . the luxuries which his service provides. During National Retail Grocers Week it is fitting that you should know that "It Pays You to Know Your Square Deal Grocer."

THE GROCERS INSTITUTE

The many Retail Grocers, Wholesalers, Provision Companies, etc., that belong to the Square Deal Independent Grocers Association, maintain a Grocers Institute. This Institute acts as a clearing house for all the many details that the grocery business entails. It supervises and places the Square Deal advertisement each week. It maintains a weekly bulletin service to each member. It guards your health, for each product that comes on the food market must have the Square Deal approval for wholesomeness. Open House Marks Fifth Observance

The fifth annual National Retail Grocers week opened Monday with all grocers from coast to coast observing the "open house" celebration. As in the past wide publicity is being given the slogan "It Pays to Know Your Grocer," the meaning being that a closer personal relationship between the "man behind the counter" and his customer will be mutually beneficial.

Throughout the week representative grocers will be guests at various public functions to be staged in many parts of the nation. Civic and public leaders are joining in the tribute.

Everywhere that a grocery may be found regardless of the size of the hamlet or city, customers and producers are joining the food trade in a demonstration in honor of the neighborhood grocer.

Several hundred thousand individual retail grocers who distribute two-thirds of all the foods sold in the United States greet consumers with bargain parades, personal greetings and general festival activity.

Colorful advertising material of various types lend a gay carnival appearance to big and little stores alike.

The celebration promises to be one of the most unusual in the history of the country. From morning until evening throughout the week there will be demonstrations expressing good will and appreciation for the grocers and the job they are doing.

PRICES LOWER DESPITE MANY REFINEMENTS IN MERCHANDISE

"The good old days" were good enough but few persons stop to consider the rapid strides made in the grocery business alone in recent years and the variety of items now offered across the local grocery counter.

When Abraham Lincoln worked as a clerk in southern Illinois, the tiny store had barely 100 items in stock. Yet the community which was dependent on the primitive store for food supplies managed to survive. In fact it is probable that the people in that region thought they were living very well and they were, by comparison with more remote areas. But ill health was prevalent and much misery marked the days of the residents. How much of it was attributable to the food supply and thereby to diet values may not be known.

Of course there was little the pioneers could do about their groceries. The food supply system was a makeshift. There was no organized service involved. Trade was an individualistic matter. The buyer was the aggressor and the seller indifferent. Profit was solely the essence of all transactions.

The turn of the century was marked by rapid strides in improvement. The considerations of health became paramount. Order and attractive appearance became factors in all merchandising. More and more was learned about food values and the care and preservation of edibles. People became more fastidious regarding their supplies. The trade realized that improvements were imperative because outsiders were coming in with new ideas.

Thus the era of specialization was turned to the grocery trade. Engineers began improving the physical surroundings for food distribution. Medical science began cataloguing food values. Other engineers applied refrigeration and heat and moisture to preservation problems. Manufacturers began the use of sanitary packing.

Artists began tinkering with arrangement and background for the eye appeal. City plan experts began developing the location idea. In a word the entire batteries of the world of science were turned on the trade and in a surprisingly short time revolutionized the whole character of the grocery business.

And the bewildering part about it is that the prices of today, including this vast scope of refinement, are lower than they were when a heap of miscellaneous provisions constituted a grocery store.

STOCKS MAKE RECOVERY BID IN MART TODAY

Motors, Steels Attract Modest Support; Many Leaders Fail To Respond to Trade.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Selected stocks made a bid for recovery in today's market although many leaders failed to respond.

Attracting modest early buying were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Du Pont, American Can, United Aircraft, General Motors, Chrysler, Western Union and Pennsylvania.

Bonds were a shade uneven, as were commodities.

A mildly optimistic view of the political scene, brokers said, inspired some short covering here and there. Foreign news continued confusing.

Market encouragement was found in the condition statement of Federal Reserve Member Banks in 101 cities for the week ended Oct. 16, disclosing another substantial jump in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans.

Holders of the steels noted estimates consumption of the metal is currently running at around 90 per cent of capacity whereas new orders are holding at about 95 per cent.

LOOKING FIT— TO BE PICKED

94-Year-Old Passenger Taken For $30-Roll.

ROCHESTER, Ind. — (AP) — A man and a woman gave Henry N. Pownall, 94, a ride downtown. They remarked how fit he looked for his age, and the woman poked him a little.

The two said they were evangelists. Before letting him out, they got his promise to attend a night service.

They also got $30 from his pockets, he discovered later.

GOP Nominee Says Opposition Uses 'Lofty Talk and Low Performance.'

"Do you call it a free election when you sit in conference with the Boss Hagues, the Boss Flynns and the Kelly-Nashes? Do you call it a free election when the chairman of your committee—and he could not do it without your knowledge—sends out lists of government employes and seeks to collect campaign contributions from them? Do you count it a free election when you begin to put pressure upon relief receivers and people upon WPA employment?"

Here is a candidate for president who has proclaimed himself as a liberal, as a reform candidate, but who allows three of the most corrupt political machines to try to steal the election for him without even a rebuke to them."

Willkie expressed the hope that he would be supported by "free and independent American citizens, uninfluenced by government, unseduced by flattery, uncontrolled in their voting ability."

The candidate's remarks were made after he finished a prepared address in which he said that although the administration's defense program may develop a bigger industrial system, "it will have been built upon the insecure foundation of a bigger debt."

Willkie's revised itinerary includes these Ohio appearances:

Thursday, Oct. 24—Warren, 5-5:20 p. m.; Akron, 7:15-11 p. m.

Tuesday, Oct. 29—Jackson, 10:45 a. m.-12:45 p. m.

Charges Hurled In Ohio Race

(By United Press)

Governor Bricker in a radio address last night charged that Democrats in the Ohio campaign are committed to a policy "which means financial instability" and Martin L. Davey, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, renewed his charge that a "scandalous shakedown racket" had been established in the liquor department under Bricker.

Bricker, speaking from Youngstown, said the Democrats "propose to repeal the sales tax and take away from the schools, needy aged, local governments and those on relief approximately $50,000,000 a year."

"They have failed to tell you where, if at all, they propose to get the money to replace this loss of revenue," he said.

Davey in a radio speech in Akron said that a "slick lawyer" in Columbus "shakes down" distillers and decides which brands shall be pushed for sales.

He said the reason this purported condition was not "exposed" was to be found in "a staggering amount of liquor advertising in certain big newspapers."

"They do it by arrangements with the slick lawyer in Columbus," he said. "They get advertising contracts and then the slick Columbus lawyer pulls the wires in the state liquor department."

Davey said that Bricker had reduced the number of liquor enforcement agents with the result that bootleggers were "running wild."

G. O. P. Prepares For Two Rallies

Two Republican rallies are scheduled for the remainder of the week with a number of township meetings sandwiched in between. Lieut. Governor Paul Herbert, Mayor Harold Burton of Cleveland, and J. Harry McGregor, congressman from the 17th district, are among the speakers who will be heard by Richland county Republicans this week.

Herbert a candidate for re-election, and Burton, who carries his party's banner in the race for United States senator, will be speakers tomorrow night at Republican headquarters in Mansfield. There will be a covered dish dinner for men and women at headquarters at 6:30 p. m., followed by speeches.

At the same meeting Attorney William M. Weldon will speak on the judicial ticket and candidates, and county candidates will be introduced.

Congressman McGregor will speak at a rally at Shelby high school auditorium at 7:30 p. m. Friday, which is for the entire county.

Last night, there were two township meetings for local candidates. One was held at Adario for Bloominggrove and Butler townships, with Ralph White of Mansfield and H. L. Bigbee of Bellville as speakers. The second meeting was at the Shiloh American Legion hall with Attorney Stuart Cramer, candidate for probate judge, as the speaker.

Tonight is a quiet one on the Republican calendar. Candidates will meet with precinct committeemen and workers at the Shelby headquarters at 7:30 p. m.

Thursday night there will be two township meetings, one at South school in Jefferson township, with Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch of Mansfield's municipal court, and Walter B. Woodward as speakers; and another at the grange hall in Butler, with R. B. Gardner of Mansfield, as speakers. Both meetings are scheduled for 8 p. m.

Economic Pressure on Japan Seems Next Step In U. S. Policy.

Dutch Reject Japan's Demand

BATAVIA, NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES—(U.P.)—Japanese demands that Netherlands East Indies oil contracts be annuled in her favor have been rejected, it was understood today, with the result that she was unlikely to get any considerable quantity of Netherlands oil unless the basis of negotiations was changed drastically.

The only material progress the Japanese have made in their negotiations here is to get an agreement for such oil products as are available after fulfillment of existing contracts, it was understood.

(Great Britain has contracted for all available high octane gasoline, used for airplanes.)

Sales to Japan, on the basis of present negotiations, would be on a strictly commercial basis, with no forced shifting from current markets and contracts, informants said.

They reported that the Japanese delegates had so far accepted this as the basis for discussion, and negotiations were continuing.

It was indicated that on the basis of present production Japan would be unlikely to get any considerable amount of aviation gasoline.

A joint memorandum drawn up by the Japanese and Netherlands Indies negotiators was understood to indicate that the Japanese were not, at this time at least, claiming any leadership of the Netherlands Indies under their "greater East Asia" program.
